Enos— Trail Blazer

Didn't Know Secrets Says Fleming

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming denied Tuesday he knew the contents of Britain's "secret speech" when he called on Prime Minister Macmillan in London nine days ago to ask for its full text.

A report in The Guardian of Manchester to this effect was "a gross fabrication," Mr. Fleming said. (See Guardian story, page 3.)

Scientists Survive Radioactive Diet

LONDON (Reuters)—Three scientists Tuesday ended a month of living on a diet of food and drink deliberately poisoned by radioactive fallout and said they feel perfectly fit.

They would have been happy to continue indefinitely if the food had not been so dull, they said.

The three men were Dr. J. F. Loutit, Dr. G. E. Harrison and T. E. F. Carr of the British Medical Council's radiobiological research unit at Harwell.

The bulk of the scientists' diet consisted of bread made from grain grown on land sprayed with radioactive strontium 90 and of milk from cows injected with a solution of strontium 85.

As a result of their experiment they said they are satisfied no one need fear the radioactivity which is expected to fall next spring from Russia's recent bomb explosions.

Senator's Hosts Clubbed

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—"Crazed" Katangan troops in Elisabethville last night invaded a dinner party being held for visiting U.S. Senator Thomas Dodd and his wife and dragged away two high UN officials, it was announced here.

SEN. THOMAS DODD
... Congo reception

The officials, George Ivan Smith and Brian Urquhart, were forced outside and beaten with rifle butts. Their attackers were described as "crazed gendarmes and para-commandos."

Acting Secretary General Thant ordered UN officials in Katanga to lodge a protest "in the strongest terms" against this inhuman treatment. He said the officials should demand public apologies from responsible Katanga officials and "severe punishment for the ringleaders."

Smith is temporarily in charge of UN affairs in Katanga during the absence of Dr. Cornelius O'Brien. Urquhart is assistant to Dr. Sture Linner, officer in charge of the UN operation in the Congo.

The United Nations said the two officials had attended a reception for Dodd at the U.S. consulate in Elisabethville. Then they left for a diplomatic residence for a dinner in honor of the visiting senator.

The two officials were first accosted by Katangan troops in their car en route to the dinner, the announcement said. They talked their way out, however, and proceeded to the dinner.

Later the gendarmes and para-commandos dragged Smith and Urquhart out of the house and beat them with rifle butts, the announcement said.

Smith managed to escape, but Urquhart "literally was kidnapped" for a while, but was later released on intervention of Katangan officials.

UN Raps South Africa

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The United Nations General Assembly yesterday approved a resolution demanding that South Africa's white supremacy policies be discarded.

But it discarded committee recommendations for harsh boycott measures and for sending South Africa out of the United Nations.

South Africa and Portugal cast the negative votes.

The assembly knocked out boycotts and expulsion measures from a 31-nation measure and amendments calling for arms and oil embargoes.

After hours of debate, the United Nations Security Council gave a cold shoulder last night to Cuba's complaint against the use of U.S. Navy ships in the Dominican crisis.

Not one member—including the Soviet Union—was willing to back up the Cuban charges with a formal resolution.

Earlier in the Security Council, Soviet delegate Zorin again accused the U.S. of "manoeuvres" against Cuba and the Dominican people.

U.S. Ambassador Stevenson urged the council to conclude "this exercise in futility."

Udall 'Presuming' Change in Policy

PRINCE GEORGE—In a long-awaited major Columbia River policy speech last night Justice Minister Davie Fulton unleashed a verbal barrage against a U.S. cabinet member, a scathing attack on Premier Bennett and termed B.C.'s power sale proposal a "sell-out."

He told a board of trade audience that the Conservative government's policy on the Columbia has not changed and denied it has precipitated a federal cabinet split.

Major points made by Mr. Fulton were:

- British Columbia's proposal to sell Columbia downstream benefits to the United States would be a "sellout" of provincial resources.
- Ottawa's policy against power export has not changed.
- The Bennett government "together with certain power and industrial interests in the United States" is trying to "entice us into a quick sale for a long-term period."
- A pressure and propaganda campaign to force Ottawa into approving sale of downstream benefits has "gone into high gear."
- U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall has used "pretty strong words for a U.S. cabinet minister talking about Canadian affairs" and "presumes to forecast a change in our policy."
- What the U.S. failed to get at the Columbia treaty negotiating table "is being offered them by Mr. Bennett on a platter."
- Premier Bennett "pretends without actually saying so that he has the support of the U.S. President."

Reception-Line Talk

● Seattle power talks between Premier Bennett and President John Kennedy were "little more than a rendezvous at a reception line."

● Columbia power is the cheapest British Columbia will ever get anywhere.

● Downstream benefits should be retained in British Columbia "to help in building a mature economy" and to create permanent industrial jobs.

● United States, under the terms of the Columbia treaty, already receives a fair share of development benefits and "we cannot allow Mr. Bennett to hand them our share too."

● To exchange the present Columbia arrangement "for a penny-wise and pound-foolish agreement . . . would be sheer madness."

● Premier Bennett has shown "a full measure of his partnership and showmanship, his gamesmanship and on-shipmanship . . . I invite him now to show some statesmanship."

Mr. Fulton, speaking in calm, calculated fashion and displaying little outward emotion, talked for 65 minutes, then submitted to 45 minutes of questioning from the floor where 230 persons sat paying close attention to his remarks.

Reasonable Settlement

Mr. Fulton said the federal government is prepared to negotiate and discuss the Columbia development with the B.C. government toward any reasonable settlement of the present stalemate.

"But we are not prepared to compromise the principles I have outlined," he said, making it clear that these principles are based on the treaty's provision for return to Canada, as it needs them, its share of the downstream benefit power in power and not in cash.

During the question period he said the B.C. government has the moral obligation, if not the legal obligation, to proceed with the Columbia River development under terms of the international treaty.

The federal government was not opposed to the development of the Peace River project, in which Prince George has a vital interest, but this project had certain problems which must be solved by the person responsible for creating them.

He said these problems were of cost and markets and that it was Premier Bennett's responsibility to resolve them.

Avoided the Peace

Mayor Garvin Dozell of Prince George rose during the question period and thanked Mr. Fulton for his detail on the Columbia but said he effectively avoided the Peace and then said he felt development of the Columbia was development of only a portion of B.C. while development of the Peace was development of all of the province.

Mr. Fulton, in replying, reiterated that Ottawa does not oppose development of the Peace but that B.C. has a moral obligation as a party to the international treaty to go ahead.

The Columbia could meet B.C.'s power needs for about 20 years, creating the problems of cost and markets for Peace power.

Mr. Fulton said there is another sort of problem—that of navigation on the Peace and Mackenzie River systems. This brought gasps and laughter from the audience but applause followed a few minutes later when Mr. Fulton had concluded explaining his position on this question.

He said he believed the problems could be solved but that they must be studied. The system was the main artery of commerce of the Northwest Territories.

DAVIE FULTON
... Bennett challenged

Fantastic Blunder —Bonner

By TERRY HAMMOND

Canadian Justice Minister Davie Fulton's slam-bang attack on B.C.'s Columbia River plans last night was later termed a "fantastic blunder" by Attorney-General Robert Bonner.

Referring to Mr. Fulton's references to U.S. cabinet member Stewart Udall the attorney-general said, "why the Canadian minister of justice should choose Prince George as the stage from which to berate the interior secretary of the United States is one of the political mysteries of the year."

INCREDIBLE GAFFE

He said Mr. Fulton's speech in Prince George was only remarkable for being "an incredible gaffe" because it "completely ignores Clause 8 of the international treaty which specifically provides for the sale to the U.S. of Canadian (downstream benefit) entitlement."

The speech, he said, "falls to reveal to the people of this province that during treaty negotiations there was a firm understanding between B.C. and Ottawa that the sale of downstream benefits to the United States would be firmly agreed upon before ratification of the treaty by Canada."

RISE ABOVE IT

Mr. Bonner said he himself insisted on this provision during treaty negotiations.

He was critical of Mr. Fulton for delivering his speech on the eve of expected Columbia talks between Premier Bennett and federal Finance Minister Donald Fleming but said he is sure the principals "will rise above it."

Premier Bennett last night declined to comment on Mr. Fulton's charges and refused to read a text of the Prince George speech.

Fulton Denies Power Compromise

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—A report the federal government might agree to a compromise on the question of letting British Columbia sell some of its Columbia power rights to the U.S. was given a "complete and unqualified" denial last night by Justice Minister Fulton.

Foulkes Points Out:

Reds Can Seal Berlin Without Force

Attack Initiative Would Be Up to West

An effective blockade of West Berlin by the Soviet Union without the use of armed forces can be accomplished if carefully planned, Gen. Charles Foulkes told Victoria Kiwanis Club yesterday.

The initiative to use force would then be up to the West, said the retired chief of the Canadian army general staff.

"Bridges could be closed for repairs or actually taken down, railways could be stopped for repairs to the right-of-way, air control bases could be jammed by the local radio stations and anti-aircraft missile units could carry out firing exercises in the air corridors."

HALTED AT BRIDGE

The general said it would be a formidable task to keep open a route 110 miles through East German territory. Army garrisons would have to be stationed along the route. Even then any armored column could be stopped at the first bridge which was taken out.

"From these observations I think perhaps you will agree that the West faces a most perplexing dilemma," said Gen. Foulkes. "We are in a very awkward situation, where we believe our rights and principles are being threatened."

"But we are in such an awkward geographical position that we cannot use the normal defensive measures to defend our rights and compel the Soviet Union to respect our stand or be guilty of committing aggression," he said.

If the West had to undertake offensive measures to maintain its present political position it would encounter the condemnation of the neutral nations and the United Nations and run the risk of starting an all-out nuclear war.

There was always the chance that increased tension and acts of violence such as trying to tear down the East German constructed wall would cause armed incidents, he continued.

But there were sufficient troops in Berlin to take care of this sort of action.

Gen. Foulkes said that the Soviet Union had demonstrated a genuine concern that a re-armed German republic may some day attempt to unify Germany and readjust the Polish frontier by use of force.

The general said the role of NATO forces in Germany, including the Canadian brigade and air division, was to provide a shield that would hold a minor aggression.

Toys Take Trip for 500 Fund

As in years past, The Daily Colonist 500 Christmas Fund has become a rallying point for many public spirited groups in the city dedicated to perpetuating the meaning of the holiday.

A toy donated to the Kinsmen Giant Bingo slated for Memorial Arena on Monday will not only help the fund but will provide some fun for the giver as well.

Turning the key in at the door entitles the donor to a ticket on the turkeys put up for raffle by the Kinsmen to help the fund.

The toys will then be taken to Maynard's Auction Rooms at 731-33 Johnson. Here, toys of all sizes, shapes and description will be knocked down to the highest bidder, with the 500 Fund the beneficiary.

Have, too, volunteer work come to the aid of the fund. Toys will be hauled to Maynard's on a truck donated by Art Kool of Reliable Transfer.

As in other years, toy buyers can be assured that every penny paid at the auction finds its way into the 500 Fund.

Giving to the 500 Fund is probably the easiest thing you'll do this Christmas season. Just mail or bring what you feel you can spare to The Daily Colonist, 2631 Douglas.

Since lists of donors are published periodically, those who give should specify whether they wish to remain anonymous.

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

The battle of Central Saanich is over. The winners are the real estate men, and the spoils are the green acres of that municipality, which will soon be cut up and built over with houses.

It wasn't a hard battle. The defenders were a few professional planners, supported by a handful of citizens. They tried to save a choice part of Central Saanich—between one-quarter and one-third of the municipality—from the power saw and the bulldozer.

Their defense was beaten from inside by the members of Central Saanich municipal council, who threw open the gates to the subdividers.

This column is written before the meeting of Central Saanich council has ended, but there is little doubt Reeve Gordon Lee and a majority of his council will push through third reading of the subdivision bylaw the way they want it—against the advice of the Capital Region Planning Board.

If they don't do it now, they will do it soon. They probably have the support of a majority of Central Saanich ratepayers, who want the chance to sell their land and make money.

Landowners feel they have the right to do as they please with their land.

Do they really have that right? Or should some other people, outside Central Saanich, have a chance to stop them?

A Little Kingdom

Is Central Saanich a little kingdom of its own, or is it part of the capital region?

Upstairs on Government Street experts employed by the Capital Region Planning Board are drawing up blueprints for the orderly growth of all Greater Victoria.

In the municipal hall at Saanichton local politicians are cutting the plan into paper dolls. Both planners and politicians believe themselves to be in the right.

Two by-law devised by the Capital Region Planning Board would have let people build houses on small lots in districts near settled townships, in such districts as Brentwood.

It would have protected farm land by forbidding people to carve their land into pieces any smaller than three acres in some areas, six acres in other areas.

Reeve Lee proposed amendments that would do away with the three-acre minimum and allow the land to be cut into much smaller pieces—15,000 square feet where there was water laid on, 25,000 square feet where there was no water laid on. This brings the minimum size down to less than half an acre.

Confine to Edges

The planners had reasons for trying to confine small-lot subdivision to the edges of townships already built up.

One reason was economy. It is cheaper to hook up new houses to light and water in an existing township than it is to string spidery lines of communication across country to scattered clumps of houses here and there.

It is cheaper to add a room to an existing school than to build a new school elsewhere.

Closely-spaced houses in a township are cheaper to serve than scattered clumps of houses. They provide lower-cost fire and police protection, garbage collection.

Suburban sprawl means higher taxes. After a time, farmers are taxed out of business.

Should this process be stopped, and is there any way to do it? More tomorrow.

New Police Tape Cuts Manpower

Police commission approved the 330 tender of Island Blue Print Co. to provide two tape-measuring devices to be used in accident investigations.

The new tape measures eliminate the need of one officer to hold the tape while another takes the measurement, the commission was told. Presumably, it could be a "considerable saving in manpower."

City police will also get their first compact car. Commissioners approved purchase of a domestic compact to be used by the detective office.

Hay Fever Could Be Step Toward Asthma Condition

By JOSEPH MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had trouble with hay fever for the last six years and my doctor informed me it could eventually turn into asthma. Does such a possibility exist?—D. M.

Yes. Hay fever is hypersensitivity to pollen, ragweed being the principal but not the only offender.

Droopy nose and teary eyes are only two of several reactions to pollen—or to any other material or food to which a person may be overly sensitive. Other reactions include such things as rashes, head ache, itching and swelling.

Suppose the swelling or spasm happens to be in the lower part of the respiratory passages.

It makes breathing difficult because the swelling has so reduced the air space that one has to struggle to get adequate air into the lungs and out again. This is asthma.

Asthma is not, basically, a matter of "throat trouble." Rather, it is one of the several possible manifestations of allergy.

This risk of asthma is one of the real reasons why hay fever, or any other hypersensitivity, should not be dismissed as being merely a nuisance.

Let me repeat—I'm not saying hay fever will develop into asthma, but in some cases it can.

Dear Dr. Molner: A young couple sometimes leave their one-year-old baby with me in a heavy running water. The germs may be from toothbrush. Can you tell me what should be done?—G. M.

"Toothbrush" is blamed for a lot of infant ailments. True, it can make them irritable and fussy and can make them drunk, but it shouldn't cause a heavy discharge from the nose.

He probably has an infection—maybe tonsils or adenoids but more probably a sinus infection which is more common in infants than is generally realized. And allergy is another possible cause.

Dear Dr. Molner: Am I wrong in thinking that a two-year-old child is too young to eat popcorn or nuts? Aren't their systems too delicate to digest them?—Mrs. R. T.

You're right, but not as a matter of digestibility—it's the danger of getting particles caught in the windpipe. I positively would not give either of these foods to such a young child.

Piano 'Magic'

Feat by Iturbi

By BERT BINNY

There was not only a packed auditorium at the Royal Theatre last night but there was an overflow audience of 50 or 60 on the stage as well.

The artist whose fame and popularity brought about this unusual state of affairs was pianist, conductor and, indeed, film star, Jose Iturbi.

Artur Rubinstein, about 10 years ago, and Thomas L. Thomas, in 1948, accomplished the same feat. And in none of these instances was the huge audience disappointed.

Mr. Iturbi is an exponent of piano magic. He discloses more facets in the character of his selections than would seem possible. There is great depth of interest in listening to him.

An excellent example of this was the familiar Chopin item which formed his first encore. This he imbued with a rare vitality unknown and unimagined by the vast majority of pianists who play it.

Much of this effect Mr. Iturbi accomplishes by the most delicate distinctions in dynamics.

Mr. Iturbi's program was drawn from the works of Mozart, Schumann and Chopin and concluded with three compositions by his compatriot, Isaac Albeniz.

Graver for Wife to Sin Than Husband

ROME (Reuters) — Italy's Constitutional Court ruled yesterday that the present law on adultery, which provides for a possible jail sentence for the wife but not for the husband, does not violate the principle of equality laid down in the constitution.

Under the Criminal Code, enacted 30 years ago, a wife faces up to one year in jail if convicted of adultery, and up to two years if found guilty of an "adulterous relationship." A husband cannot be jailed for simple adultery. But he can be sentenced to a maximum of two years in jail if convicted of "concubinage." The present law only deals with a husband who "keeps a concubine in the conjugal home or elsewhere in a notorious manner."

The court said the constitutional principle that all citizens have equal social dignity and are equal before the law regardless of sex was designed to prevent arbitrary discrimination.

But "it cannot mean that the legislators should be obliged to lay down the same discipline for all. On the contrary, he must be able to adjust legal rules to the various aspects of social life, laying down different rules for different situations."

Reds Again Wreck A-Test Ban Hopes

Russia Won't Take Pledge To Atomic Anonymous

ARTHUR DEAN

GENEVA (UPI)—The United States yesterday denounced Russia's plan for an uncontrolled nuclear test ban as a move to "deceive world public opinion" and to make it impossible for the West to conduct tests despite the recent massive Soviet nuclear blast series.

U.S. chief nuclear negotiator Arthur Dean said Russia's motto seems to be: "Let's all join Atomic Anonymous until the Soviet Union wants to fall off the no-test wagon and test again."

Dean spoke to the three-power Geneva nuclear test ban conference that resumed after a three-week recess. In a "tactical" session before the conference, the U.S. and British delegates agreed to turn down Russia's new plan.

UNASHAMED PROPAGANDA

The U.S. delegation chief blasted the Soviet plan as an "unashamed propaganda move" and "a clear indication the Soviet Union does not want a test ban treaty."

After a day-long session, both Dean and Soviet chief negotiator Semyon Tsarapkin told newsmen there was now nothing to negotiate.

Dean said the Soviet plan was being forwarded to Washington but the Russians had been told at the conference table that the West "found this completely, totally and absolutely unsatisfactory and unacceptable."

ANCIENT TREATY

The Soviet delegate said the current world situation made international controls of nuclear tests "impossible." He said his government could "not negotiate on the ancient treaty proposed by the West."

"Nothing can hide the obvious fact that the Soviet plan marks a Soviet retreat from every previous commitment for international treaty control made by it at the conference," Dean told the talks.

Dean gave the American reply after Tsarapkin formally read Moscow's four-point plan calling for an uncontrolled, indefinite moratorium on nuclear tests.

INVITES FRANCE

The Soviet plan called for a permanent ban on tests in the atmosphere, in outer space and underwater, with only "national" detection systems to track them, and a temporary moratorium on underground tests. It also asked that France be a party to the initial test ban treaty.

Canada Never in Dark About 'Secret Speech'

LONDON (CP) — Now that "secret speech" is known to the world, a British newspaper says that Canada all along knew virtually everything it contained.

In the latest development of a bizarre episode of leaks and counter-leaks, The Guardian says in a front-page story the Canadians "have been keeping to themselves" the fact that they, as well as the Americans, were recipients of a grand-scale leak.

The Guardian recalls that Fleming was in Paris Nov. 15-18 as chairman of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, and as such was in close daily contact with many Western finance ministers including those of the six Common Market countries, to whom the Oct. 10 speech was delivered by Edward Heath, lord privy seal.

Patients Float on Air? Pig Has Passed Test

LONDON (AP) — Doctors have made a pig fly in the interests of medical science.

They did it by borrowing the principle of the Hovercraft and floating the pig on a cushion of air.

Doctors hope the idea will speed up the recovery of patients with severe body burns or spinal paralysis who should avoid contact with beds.

Researches have been going on at the department of biomechanics and surgical materials at Stanmore Hospital, Middlesex.

In early experiments the doctors succeeded only in bouncing a man up and down on an air jet. Then they consulted with engineers developing a Hovercraft.

Using 12 specially designed jets, the doctors then applied the principle to a pig. It worked. One anesthetized pig was kept floating in the air for an hour.

Nearing a Reality

IT IS REASSURING to learn that positive steps are being taken to secure full autonomy for the embryo Victoria University, at present confusingly known officially by its old name of Victoria College. This is what the public expected and subscribed for during the successful fund-raising campaign of two years ago.

A fillip to its recognition as a separate degree-granting institution comes with the recommendation of UBC Dean Andrew that this should take place at the earliest moment "they feel ready to accept this status," a sentiment that implies welcome acquiescence by Point Grey in this logical development.

That local university authorities are ready right now is evident from the new charter being drafted under the leadership of Judge Clearhugh, the president of the Victoria College Council, who hopes it can be presented to the Legislature, perhaps at the next session, for speedy ratification. Judge Clearhugh aims to clear all the formalities so that by 1962 or 1963 the local university might be functioning independently and under its own statutory authority.

This would coincide nicely with the expected opening of the new classroom building and the student union building on the Gordon Head campus next September, the forerunners of the fine physical properties to arise later in successive construction.

In a very few years therefore Victoria University should be in full swing as a degree-granting institution of higher learning whose fame and reputation should grow quickly with the years. Situated as it will be in a unique and attractive setting in a town peculiarly suited to the academic atmosphere, it should win favor among faculty circles as the kind of smaller-type university which draws the best professional talent in the educational field.

The standards of education at Victoria College in the past have been so high, and widely acknowledged as such in the Canadian academic world, it should not be long before the new Victoria University degrees win for themselves a standing comparable to those of older universities. In time indeed the local university may well acquire a preferred status in the educational realm.

There will be general satisfaction in this area that the efforts towards making a long-held ambition a reality seem about to bear fruit, to the advantage of students of the Vancouver Island area, this community as a whole, and of higher learning in the province itself.

Victoria College authorities are to be commended on their faithful pursuit of the objects in hand, now soon to be crowned with success and official recognition.

A Place to Bite

THE UNITED Nations General Assembly has brought to an end its month-long debate on colonialism by approving with a 97-0 vote a resolution urging that independence be granted to the world's remaining colonial territories without delay.

The resolution was not without teeth—for it also authorized the setting up of a 17-nation special committee to study the colonial problem and make recommendations to speed up the independent process.

It was also provided with something to bite on by the United States delegate who submitted a document prepared by Mr. Adlai Stevenson which denounced the Chinese-Russian Communist combine as history's largest and most cruel empire, from which 12 million persons have fled since the Second World War.

"In its frenetic effort to cover up its own dismal record in the field of colonialism and human rights the Soviet Union has levelled charges against the United States that it is allied with colonialists and... is itself a colonial power," the U.S. ambassador charged.

"The Soviet Union," he continued, "is fearful that the solution of outstanding colonial problems involving the West will impel the United Nations to focus attention on the situation in the vast Soviet empire."

"Moreover, in the past 15 years, as the process of self-determination in the ex-colonial areas of Asia and Africa was rapidly expanding the world community of free and independent nations, the contrary process was taking place within the periphery of the Soviet Union."

Though the make-up of the UN special committee is not yet known, it is to be hoped that its members—states—wherever they may be—will pay heed to Mr. Stevenson's words.

In speaking for the United States, he speaks for a country which throughout its history has been obsessed with the idea of freedom and thus marked as colonialism's greatest foe.

On this basis, backed by the fact that the United States has done more than any other non-colonial power to assist—morally and financially—the emerging nations toward their goal of independence, his words can hardly be ignored.

Healthy Situation

RESIDENTS of Victoria's neighbor municipalities have reason to feel gratified this year at the number of candidates who have volunteered their services in municipal office.

The close of nominations finds three men, each with his own variety of ideas and record of community service, seeking the reversion of Saanich's three offering the voters a similar choice of leadership in Oak Bay, and every available councillor's seat in Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt contested.

This healthy situation in itself indicates that the people of the three municipalities are taking a lively interest in the conduct of their local affairs and the problems that face them collectively as the municipalities grow and progress; such numbers of candidates seldom can be brought to come forward where an apathetic electorate is content to allow things to go along, or stand still, in the same old way.

But as well as being a reflection of interest on the part of the voters, the multiplicity of candidates can be counted upon to create even more interest; the contests between those seeking office, with their differing views, should help bring home to many residents how much they—and their pocketbooks, and the value of their homes—may be affected by the course of municipal events.

It is thus doubly to be appreciated that for the elections of December 7, so many candidates should have stepped forward.

Thinking Aloud

"... of show, and show, and being best..."

By TOM TAYLOR

WILL English, Welsh, Irish and Scotsmen in 10, 20 or 30 years time still be Britons or Britishers?

Or will they belong to a new caste called Europeans?

In one of his illustrious wartime speeches Churchill said that "if the Empire were to last 1,000 years this would still be its finest hour." Britain's back was then to the wall, a beleaguered island fortress.

The postwar scales which have altered the power balances seem a far reward for the valiant response which the Churchillian eloquence evoked.

Churchill would not dream literally that the Empire would last 1,000 years; that touch was rhetorical. But equally he could not have imagined that the "liquidation" over which he desired not to preside would come so quickly.

The Empire and Commonwealth has changed vastly, in a manner that in their youth would have seemed unthinkable to many of those still alive, including Victorians. The British Raj has withdrawn from numerous of its former components, who, looking with envy at the Pandora box of independence, have opened the box to their own confusion.

That much alone has altered the Commonwealth complex, which is now a grouping dissimilar in its concepts and in some respects as far removed from unity of character as could be imagined.

There is more serious "liquidation" in the offing, perhaps, if that term may be used, bound up in that burning question of the day, the European Common Market.

The word market, I think, belies the current arguments, even though the economics of the matter bid fair to have their dislocating effects. The governing premise is political.

And on the political, character of national life all else depends.

The criterion of the Common Market bloc is that it aims to create a supra-national authority, a united states of Europe, a third world force which in time would inevitably envelop its peoples in a common citizenship.

What this would do to existing national outlooks and habits can be conjectured. A citizen would be a European above all else.

This is the "market" Britain seeks to join, and in the words of Lord Privy Seal Edward Heath, now revealed for the first time, thus:

"There can be no doubt that the success or failure of these discussions will determine the future shape of Europe. They will affect profoundly the way of life, the political thought and even the character of each one of our peoples."

And further: "We desire to become full, whole-hearted and active members of the European community in its widest sense."

These are significant words, opening up a glimpse of days to come and inviting pertinent questions.

Do they preface an end to British national character and life; to its individuality? Do they imply the future status of Britain as a province or state of a supra-national European federation?

Will Canadians returning 30 or 40 years hence to the land from which they sprang recognize the country of their birthright?

And what about this tenuous association known as the Commonwealth? Will it disappear?

What indeed about the British Raj itself? Can the Crown embrace titular headship in nations outside the ECMA and yet be subsidiary within it? The "market" connotations pale beside the "political" implications of this new Old World development.

RUMORS OF OUR PROSPERITY ARE GROSSLY EXAGGERATED.

In Latin America

One Formidable Problem

By ARNOLD TOYNEBE, from London

THE 20 Latin American republics have in common with each other one urgent and formidable problem. Next to the avoidance of self-extinction, this problem is foremost among perhaps three-quarters of the human race today. It concerns all the so-called "underdeveloped" countries but it is not the economic problem of harnessing modern applied science to increase a country's productivity. It is the problem of social justice.

This comes first because, if social justice is lacking, an increase of aggregate wealth will merely make a rich minority richer, while leaving the poor majority absolutely no better off and relatively poorer.

This was the issue in the recent revolution in Ecuador. It was also the issue in the conference of the Organization of American States that was held, last August, in Uruguay, to implement "the Alliance for Progress" that had been initiated in March by President Kennedy.

The open question is not whether there shall or shall not be a revolution aiming at the achievement of social justice. The present-day movement for social justice is an elemental force and of worldwide range. This demand is undoubtedly going to assert itself through one kind of revolution or another. Any attempt to establish social justice is bound to be revolutionary, because the distribution of the benefits of civilization has everywhere been so inequitable in the past.

But what kind of revolution is it to be? This is the open question, and a crucial one, because a choice between two different kinds of revolution is being offered to the present-day world: one of mankind, and these two prescriptions are in competition with each other.

Social justice can be achieved by a revolution in which a privileged minority consents to a redistribution of wealth in more equitable proportions.

The practical possibility of a social revolution of this voluntary, and therefore peaceful, kind is demonstrated by the fact that it has already taken place in a number of North American countries, including Britain. The United States, too, has gone fairly far in the same direction, in spite of the rather doctrinaire North American cult of economic individualism. In the United States, as in Britain, direct taxes, for example, are steeply graded and are effectively collected.

The alternative kind of revolution is the penalty to which a country is exposed when vested interests obstinately refuse to yield to anything short of superior force. And the practicability of this kind of revolution too has been demonstrated, such as in Russia, China and Cuba.

A revolution of the Cuban type awaits any Latin American country whose ruling minority refuses to carry out a revolution of the British type. This refusal would be a "gran rifiuto," and would be doubly inexcusable now, because any Latin American country that genuinely embarks on a revolution for social justice by peaceful agreement has been assured of generous U.S. financial aid.

On this issue—and it is one of life and death—all Latin American countries are in an identical situation, which they share with most Asian and African countries. Most Latin American countries are also in an identical economic situation. They are agricultural countries that have now entered on the first phase of the Industrial Revolution.

At the same time, the Latin American countries fall into two groups concerning the composition of their populations. There is one group with those of the United States and Canada, mainly derived from Europe, but partly from Africa as well. In Latin America, this group includes not only Argentina, Chile and Uruguay, but also Brazil, Venezuela, Colombia and Costa Rica.

The other group consists of countries in which the present population is mainly native American in race, with a relatively small infusion of European and African blood. This group includes Mexico, Guatemala, most of the other Central American republics except Costa Rica, and, in South America, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Paraguay. In all these countries there are culturally unassimilated "Indian" elements which complicate their social structure and give a special character to the local demand for social justice.

What is to be the future of the Indian community in Ecuador? This, no doubt, is one of the questions behind the recent revolution there. Standing at the door of the cathedral in Quito, I have watched Indian men and women shambling in and out self-consciously and apologetically, as if they had no right to show their faces in the capital of what is officially a modern country. On the other hand, in go-ahead Guayaquil, I have seen other Ecuadorian Indians becoming effective modern technicians and earning wages that would still seem fabulous to their brothers at home in the ancient Indian villages in the Ecuadorian sierra.

The wind of change is blowing hard now through Indian America. Like truth, the demand for social justice is mighty, and, by the violent kind of revolution if not by the peaceful kind, it is assuredly going to prevail.

They have broken up the former large estates and have resumed possession of the land. This has happened since 1952—and it was overdue, for, by then, more than 400 years had passed since the Indian peasantry of what is now Bolivia was crushed by the Spanish conquest of the Empire of the Incas.

In Latin American countries containing still unassimilated

Indian communities, these Indians remain outside the pale of the national life. Their position was not changed by the war of independence against Spain which brought the Latin American republics into existence in the early years of the nineteenth century. All that happened, from the Indians' point of view, was that they became the subjects of the local Spanish-descended latifundarios (manorhold landlords) instead of the Spanish crown.

Till our own time, the political and social structure of most Latin American republics has remained hierarchical; and even in Mexico, which has been officially in a state of "permanent revolution" since 1910, agrarian reform is still far from complete. In 1950, 62.2 per cent of the agricultural workers in Mexico were reported to be still working for owners, with no land-holdings of their own.

In the social and economic hierarchy of the Indian-American countries, the unassimilated Indians are at the bottom of the scale. But, in Indian America, class divisions do not coincide with racial differences, as they do in the Old South of the United States and a number of African countries. An unassimilated Indian can "pass" (to use the North American word) with an ease that would be the envy of a Negro in the United States or in South Africa.

If he learns to talk Spanish, takes to wearing Western clothes, and moves to the city, he can become a Ladino—that is to say, an acknowledged member of the Hispanic version of modern civilized society. And, in a republic in which social injustice is punctuated—and occasionally punctured—by violent revolution, any Ladino may, with luck, rise high, even if he is pure Indian, and not of mixed Indian and European blood, as the majority of the population is by now in Mexico and Peru.

What is to be the future of the Indian community in Ecuador? This, no doubt, is one of the questions behind the recent revolution there. Standing at the door of the cathedral in Quito, I have watched Indian men and women shambling in and out self-consciously and apologetically, as if they had no right to show their faces in the capital of what is officially a modern country. 'My Military Blood Stirs'

Stand by Your Beds

By CASSANDRA, from London

WHEN I was in the Army they taught me to drive a car.

I could already drive a car and my instructor, I worked out, was two years old when I first took out my driving licence.

They taught me to ride a motorcycle. I could already ride a motorcycle.

They taught me to ride a bicycle. I could already ride a bicycle.

But what they did teach me was something I had never done before—to ride a bicycle "to attention."

A chum of mine who negligently went to sleep in a jeep and sank blissfully back into the road at about 40 miles an hour was at once taken to a hospital in Italy where in bed he was taught "to lie to attention" when the medical officer paid his rounds.

Now I hear a pleasant echo of this old military mumbogumbo that still lingers on in our military hospitals.

It so happens that with the run-down of the armed forces, some of the military hospitals have more beds available than the ordinary hospitals and a slight surplus of M.O.s.

Quite sensibly, civilian patients are directed to them. A friend of mine—an ordinary National Health patient—was amused that in a mixed ward of civilians and armed forces personnel he had to "stand by" his bed four times a day.

At 10.30 a.m. when the flight lieutenant came round. At about 11.45 a.m. when the group captain made his inspection.

At 5 p.m. for a general stand-by. And at 9.30 p.m. when the sister paid her nightly visit.

How my military blood stirs at these old warlike tribal customs.

The Immigrants

Mr. R. A. Butler, with his genius for disastrous compromise, has really put his foot in it with his latest proposals for immigration.

By admitting Irish men from Eire and excluding West Indians and other non-whites, he has put up the color bar in a way that will cause exultant rejoicing in Dr. Verwoerd's ranks in South Africa.

The Commonwealth, already in an exceedingly delicate state of health, will be in danger of collapsing if Mr. Butler's selective racial program goes through.

I see no objection to excluding immigrants with criminal records—such as Australia does—or deporting those who take to crime in Britain.

To admit the Irish, who are not even members of the Commonwealth, and to exclude those who are, will hardly cause cheers in India, Pakistan, the West Indies, Malaysia, Ceylon and Ghana.

Nuclear-Fueled Plants

By FRANK MACOMBER, from La Jolla

A Whole New Science

IN 50 years nuclear-fueled power plants will have replaced most of the coal-fired utilities which furnish electricity to the nation. This is the forecast of Titus G. Le Clair, manager of the nuclear power applications section of General Dynamics Atomic.

Le Clair has seen both sides of the coin. For more than a quarter century he was in the private utility business. Then he helped in 1952 to pioneer the first atomic-powered electric plant at Dresden, Ill. It produces 180,000 kilowatts, or 3 per cent of the output of the Commonwealth Edison Co., which serves the greater Chicago area.

Le Clair still is pioneering, for General Atomics is a leader in the development of the gas-cooled high temperature nuclear reactor as a producer of electricity. The firm, under Le Clair's direction, also is deep in research projects aimed at nuclear fusion and "direct conversion"—two untried approaches for producing more electricity at less cost.

Today, says Le Clair, the electric utilities are heading into their greatest period of growth—and change. Yet they have reached nearly the peak of efficiency, as far as power vs. cost is concerned.

"In the atom-powered electric field," claim Le Clair, "we are embarking on a whole new science. We have a chance to increase our efficiency rapidly. Our chances are very good."

"For many years, of course, the atomic power plant will supplement rather than replace the fossil-fueled plant. But in 40 to 50 years I can foresee the day when the atomic plant—perhaps not as we know it today but in some form—will supplant the coal-fired utility."

The average life of a coal-burning plant is roughly 40 years, Le Clair points out. "When we have perfected the gas-cooled high temperature reactor can be operated

Another fact that Butler seemed to find unwelcome when challenged by Mr. Fenner Brockway, is that on the latest available figures more people left this country than came in.

The total of emigrants from the U.K. to all countries abroad from 1952 to 1959 was 1,046,170.

The number, over the same period, who entered the U.K. was 542,036.

Megadeath

In a recent article on American scientists and atomic war I attributed the use of the word "megadeath" to Dr. Herman Kahn, who is the director of the Hudson Institute in the United States.

He tells me that he has never heard of it when he visited England where it seems to have caught on and he knows of only two instances where the rather grisly expression has been used by Americans working in national security.

We seem to have fostered the ugly word—not our trans-Atlantic friends.

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

WHEN we think of bullies, we think of men, or boys. It does not occur to us that there are female bullies.

On account of traffic stopped for the light, the bus had to pull up 20 feet short of the white post. The driver opened the doors, the dismounting passengers fled heavily off, and six or seven boarders climbed heavily on. The last to enter was a middle-aged, well-dressed woman in a red pillbox hat. She was mad clean through.

"You are supposed," she snapped clearly and loudly, "to stop only at the marked bus stop!"

"Sorry, lady," said the driver. "It's time somebody," said she, "have you a piece of their mind? Stopping an old place!"

Possibly she had been first in line at the post, and found herself last in line. Maybe her feet hurt. Maybe it was a bad day for her, all round. Anyway, glaring, red-faced, she was a bully, and surged down to take the vacant seat last before the exit.

A couple of blocks on, a cheerful man with a smile of parcels went to the exit, turned, and favored us in the back of the bus with a big fat wink. As he stepped down on the step, he deftly jugged the end of one of his parcels against the back of the red pillbox hat, tipping it down over the lady's eyes, the most infuriating thing that can happen to ladies. But wonderful for bullies.

Letters to the Editor

Right Cause

Congratulations to Greater Victoria school board for its stand on teaching students A-bomb survival.

How can parents keep children in ignorance of such things as bombs? If such was possible it would be frightening to youth to awaken to the fact that these things do exist and that their own parents have not had the courage to tell them. How could they trust their parents?

Seems to me it is elemental to teach children not to play in busy streets because cars and trucks can kill. I have yet to see a child worry about the danger, but they do heed the sound of a horn if they are on the street.

Even my five-year-old asks to have newspapers and news-magazines read to her. From the funnies to the headlines my husband and I do our best to explain in simplified terms.

Ignorance is not bliss.

Attack on VoW

May I offer my support of Mr. Knott re the attack of Mr. Hills upon the Voice of Women and their sincere efforts to do something about winning the peace and defeating those nuclear maniacs.

It's the utter lack of leadership and effort on the part of the Hills and their ilk that frightens me. There is a total absence of interest on the part of the church in the fight against annihilation. Does the church equate an effort to banish the bomb with being a Red?

We know pretty well who are in the forefront of the Red-baiting of sincere workers for peace and disarmament...

Burrard Dividend For Estate Taxes

VANCOUVER — The $4,600,000 dividend paid to the holders of Class B shares of the Burrard Dry Dock Co. Ltd. was for estate tax purposes, according to executive vice president J. W. Hudson.

HELD BY FAMILY

All B shares are held by the Wallace family of Vancouver and Victoria.

The dividend would go to a family holding company, and would not be paid directly to members of the family, he said.

This would go to consolidate the family position for estate taxes and permit the continuation of the present ownership and management.

ONLY ALTERNATIVE

If no such steps were taken, the only alternative would be a sale to outside interests, Mr. Hudson said. Corporate steps were taken to consolidate subsidiaries of the Burrard subsidiary companies during the past year, he said, so as to enable the dividend to be paid without impairing future operations of the company or its obligations to Class A shareholders, he said.

Two Rejections

Government Loses $40,000 in Bids

Rejection of two bids yesterday cost the B.C. government about $40,000.

Provincial cabinet, acting on the recommendation of Highways Minister P. A. Gagliardi, approved the rejection of a low tender for an overhead pass on the Trans-Canada Highway as well as the rejection of a high bid for the sale of half an acre of department-owned land.

National Pacific Construction, with a bid of $98,175, was $24,295 lower in its tender for the construction of an overhead pass near the Dry-nock side in the Interior. But the cabinet order stated: "The technical ability of the low tenderer is unknown and financial reports indicate the said firm has limited resources."

BID TOO LOW

The bid was considered too low for "satisfactory performance." It was added, and the firm had been unable to obtain a performance bond and labor and materials bond.

The job was given to D. S. Manning Construction Co. Ltd., whose bid of $122,470 "compares favorably with the departmental estimates."

LAND SALE

The other case concerned the sale of 36-acre of land at the Big Bend near Revelstoke.

Shell Oil Company, apparently seeking a service station site, bid $25,389 for the land. Next highest tender was from Frederick Beruschi of Revelstoke with a bid of $10,500.

TURNED DOWN

But the department said the Shell bid contained unacceptable conditions regarding access and should be turned down.

Sale of the land to Mr. Beruschi was approved. The two decisions cost the government $39,184.

Bonner Rejects BCE Claim

By PETER BRUTON

Provincial cabinet has turned thumbs down on a bid by B.C. Power Corporation to sue the government for double the compensation paid for the takeover of the B.C. Electric.

A brief, four-paragraph cabinet order said due consideration had been given the application and that "the attorney-general advises the fiat not be granted."

Attorney-General Robert Bonner later announced he had an eight-page report from his legal officials explaining why the petition should be denied. The report would not be made public, he said.

But, continued Mr. Bonner, the reasons for the refusal were twofold.

LEGAL VIEW

It was the legal view that where the securing of property by statute was lawful and, secondly, where the legislation provided compensation or the mode of compensation, secondary importance to "the more involved action" in the Supreme Court.

"I'm sorry, but it can't be put any simpler than that," said Mr. Bonner.

The B.C. Power Corporation, former parent body of the BCE, had sought permission to sue the government for $225,000,000 instead of the $110,000,000 set by the government for the company.

The company launched an action before the Supreme Court of B.C. in an attempt to have the takeover act declared unconstitutional.

Mr. Bonner said the petition for a fiat by the B.C. Power Corporation had become of

100 - 10 MONTHS TO PAY

At Least Once in a Lifetime

By Harrison J. Cowan

MONTREAL — The process of growing up seems to be marked with a procession of watches — the toy watch as a child, the graduation watch, watches received on sundry gift occasions. But most of us still hope to own not just another watch, but the finest watch obtainable. The desire is not vanity, but reflects an inward awareness of the sacred nature of time, the measure of life itself.

How do you find such a watch? Jewels alone are not enough, nor "specifications" such as shockproof, waterproof, anti-magnetic, etc. These are found in the cheapest watches.

Surprisingly, however, as years pass you will learn that you paid no premium whatever for the superior qualities of your Longines. With reasonable care, your Longines watch should remain a treasured and cherished possession throughout an adult lifetime.

Margaret's Baby Named After Duke of Windsor?

LONDON—David Albert Charles are the names chosen for Princess Margaret's baby.

David is the name of Margaret's favorite uncle, the Duke of Windsor, once the Prince of Wales.

David is an honored Welsh name and the baby's father, former society photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones, prides himself on his Welsh blood.

The baby's official title will be Viscount Linley.

BELGRADE—Yugoslav President Tito has influenza and his doctors have advised him to remain at home under treatment.

NEW YORK—Giovanni Battista, 70, had his "night" here. He hired Carnegie Hall and made his debut as a basso. Some 2,800 friends and employees cheered the multi-millionaire, whose lifetime dream had been to sing in public.

GLASGOW—Visiting hours at Law Hospital have been cut because patients complained they weren't getting enough time to watch television.

Izvestia Splashes Kennedy Views Across Page One

(AP and UPI) MOSCOW—The government newspaper Izvestia splashed across seven columns of its front page yesterday the unprecedented interview with President Kennedy.

In the interview Kennedy assured the Russian people that nobody is going to invade the Soviet Union, but said the basic threat to world peace lies in Soviet efforts to communize the world.

The interview took place last week at Hyannis Port, Mass., with Alexei Adzhubel, editor of Izvestia and son-in-law of Nikita Khrushchev, firing questions.

SOVIET ARGUMENTS
Izvestia printed verbatim the lengthy interview, which was laced at times by Soviet arguments injected during the discussion by Adzhubel. Here are the main points made by the president and read by 4,200,000 readers of Izvestia, second largest paper in the Soviet Union:

● Kennedy said the Soviet effort to expand the Communist system to "country after country" represents "the great threat to peace." If the Soviet Union would drop this drive to rule the world "I think there would be nothing that would disturb the relations between the Soviet Union and the United States."

● Russia and the United States have a "basic disagreement where issues of 'adequate inspection' are concerned," Kennedy said. There must be "an effective inspection system" if there is to be the "general and complete disarmament" which the Russians say they want.

● Kennedy believes an agreement on prohibiting nuclear weapons tests under international inspection would constitute a "first step" toward more general disarmament measures. But the president was sharply disappointed, he said, by the inability of the Western powers to negotiate with Russia a nuclear test ban.

● "The United States will not give nuclear weapons to any country, and I would be extremely reluctant to see West Germany acquire a nuclear capacity of its own," Kennedy said.

● Disengagement — the pulling apart of U.S. and Soviet troops in the heart of Europe — which the Russians have long advocated, is out of the question under present conditions, Kennedy said. "We cannot now withdraw our troops from Europe, way back across the Atlantic Ocean, when you merely withdraw your troops to the Soviet Union which is only a few hundred miles away."

● The Soviet policy of keeping Germany divided, pointed up by the East German action in walling off East Berlin, "only increases tensions rather than diminish them," the president said.

● The United States has been "reluctant to recognize East Germany as a sovereign power" because the United States does not "recognize the division of Germany." Kennedy said the German people want to be united and he thinks unity could be achieved without any threat to the interests of the Soviet Union. But he said he realizes that Russia considers it "more in their interest to keep Germany divided."

Rockefeller Departs In Grief

MANILA (UPI)—A mission of hope was ending in homecoming grief today as Gov. Nelson Rockefeller headed for New York with only the hope of a miracle that his son, Michael, 23, is not dead.

"We have to face the facts that the chances are very greatly diminished and it will be a miracle if Michael is alive," Rockefeller said. "Naturally, our prayers are that it will happen."

Albania Gets Accolade From Red China Boss

TOKYO (UPI)—Communist China yesterday proclaimed its "unbreakable friendship" with Albania and openly disputed Soviet Premier Khrushchev's denunciation of the tiny satellite's party leadership.

It was by far Peking's strongest avowal of unity with Albania since Khrushchev denounced Albanian Communist party chief Enver Hoxha and his party colleagues at the recent Soviet party congress in Moscow.

Yesterday's praise and expression of solidarity were the keynotes of a message from Red China's supreme ruler

Forestry Job Awarded To City Man

One-time student council president at Victoria University, Dr. David A. Wilson, has been appointed director of the economics division, federal department of forestry.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wilson, 3133 Delta, Dr. Wilson, 38, was commissioned in the RCN during the Second World War.

He was twice winner of a $500 Canadian Pulp and Paper Association fellowship, and took his Ph.D. degree in forest economics at the University of California.

Dr. Wilson was formerly head of economic planning and market research for the Canadian International Paper Company.

After All-Candidates Meeting

Ratepayer Group Won't Endorse Slate

A branch library for Oak Bay last night became a hot issue in the Dec. 7 municipal elections.

Candidates addressing an audience of about 100 at a meeting sponsored by Oak Bay Ratepayers' Association in the municipal hall were split over the need for local library facilities.

The meeting was highlighted by a brief, heated debate over whether taxpayers who didn't hold membership in the association were permitted to ask questions of candidates.

Chairman Harry Gregson ruled questions by non-members out of order and one man in the audience jumped up to protest. He asked: "Why in a democracy am I being denied the right to ask a question on public business?"

"Because we've rented this hall, that's why," retorted an unidentified association official.

Others in the audience protested that notices of the meeting urged "bring your friends," and Mr. Gregson suggested the association would be glad to take new memberships on the spot.

The issue was dropped then until Coun. Allan Cox, seeking re-election next month, said he thought the municipality should have sponsored an all-candidates meeting as it had done up to two years ago.

out at critics of the lack of library facilities for the municipality.

"I'm sure the council is in favor of a library, provided the majority of people want it," the reeve replied.

Council candidate Norman Pittam, a newcomer to municipal politics, said youngsters and old people in Oak Bay had difficulty getting all the books they needed because of the difficulties in travelling to the main library downtown.

Both other reeve candidates, Coun. Gordon Elworthy and Jack Barracough, said consideration should be given to setting up a branch library in the municipality.

Sgt. Ldr. Clarence Goodie later asked Mr. Murdoch if he was in favor of providing library facilities for the municipality.

"I don't wish to take issue with the reeve, but I can't believe that only a handful of people in Oak Bay seriously read books," said Mr. Pittam.

The reeve jumped up from his seat in the audience and declared, "I said no such thing."

Coun. Cox noted the pattern of bus travel in the municipality makes it easier to get downtown than to travel across Oak Bay. He added, "As long as this is the case, it appears to be more convenient to use the library downtown."

Walter Dodsworth, another council candidate, said perhaps Oak Bay should set up its own branch library.

PASSPORTS

"Certain people who are now running for the office of mayor in Victoria, if elected, will probably require Oak Bay residents to have a passport to get into the public library downtown," he said.

D. S. Gage, a real estate man running for council, said Oak Bay now enjoys municipal services cheaper than anywhere else in B.C. "That's why I'm anti-amalgamation."

W. J. Wade, civil servant, said he is seeking a council seat with a platform which calls for orderly development, sound business practices, and support for the interests of the majority of ratepayers.

After a brief closed session which followed the public meeting, directors announced the ratepayers' group would not—as it had intended—endorse a slate of candidates.

Angry Guards Evict Warden

KINGSTON (UPI) — Kingston penitentiary warden David MacLean was told by angry guards yesterday to stay outside the prison walls until they have cleaned up the mess inside.

The guards, up in arms over the knife slaying of fellow worker William Wentworth, 42, Friday moved a vote of non-confidence in the administration Monday night and demanded greater safety precautions.

"STAY AWAY"

The delegation said after the warden refused to consider the demands they told him and deputy warden A. J. Jarvis to stay away from the prison. The offices of the wardens are in the administration building, across the street from the main penitentiary block.

Warden MacLean declined comment on the threat. It was not known whether he entered the prison yesterday.

PETITION PRESENTED

At Monday night's meeting, attended by 200 guards, the delegation presented a petition charging convicts virtually run the penitentiary. Lack of discipline was at its "lowest ebb" and prisoners had become so insolent it was surprising they even let the guards inside, the petition said.

The hostility of the guards exploded into violence at one point during the meeting. Two reporters were manhandled and thrown out of the meeting hall.

George McBurnie of the Kingston Whig-Standard said he was hit "several times on the back of the head, the neck and shoulders."

Charles Yellowly, news director of radio station CKCL, said as soon as he arrived a guard shouted: "Here's another one." He was pushed and shoved bodily out of the door.

McBurnie warned further violence was brewing. "After seeing them last night," he said, "I wouldn't give two cents for the life of a prisoner in there."

SLOW QUESTIONING

Investigators, still grilling the 42-tight-lipped prisoners where Wentworth was slain, said questioning was going very slowly.

"It is a long job getting anything out of that place and often you can't use it," Det. J. D. Killen said. "It is not enough knowing who did it, you have to prove it."

Series Hoped

Program Designed For Horse Lovers

What is hoped will be the first of a series of winter meetings, designed for anyone interested in horses, will be held Friday at 8 p.m. at the CCF Hall, Richmond and Cedar Hill Cross Road.

An outline of programs designed to be both educational and entertaining has been prepared by A. W. (Bud) Mesher, which will include talks, discussions and films on horsemanship, training and care.

At Friday's meeting Dr. M. L. Olsen, well-known Victoria veterinarian, will discuss lameness in horses in an illustrated address.

There will be a question period, and also films on the training of horses.

Soon Obsolete

Tickets Dwindle
As Police Await
New City Bylaw

Victoria's police commission took a worried look at a dwindling supply of traffic tickets yesterday and will instruct the city solicitor to ask for a provincial order-in-council authorizing the city to go ahead with the use of a new type of combination ticket-summons.

But the request for the order-in-council will have to wait until city council ratifies the city's new Streets Traffic Bylaw, still in the hands of the public works committee.

ECONOMY THE REASON
The bylaw is expected to come before council sometime this week. Until it does, the ticket supply will have to continue to dwindle with no chance of replenishment.

The reason is economy. The police commission doesn't want to place an order for the old-style tickets, which would soon become obsolete.

COST ELIMINATED
The new ticket-summons, which has received the blessing of the attorney-general's office, will eliminate the cost of preparing summonses and the need of serving them.

City solicitor T. P. O'Grady explained last night that the request for an order-in-council approving the new tickets would be a routine matter.

NOT COVERED
He added that the order for printing the new tickets could not be placed until the Streets Traffic Bylaw was adopted, since it covered a number of offences not covered in the old bylaw.

Once this bylaw leaves committee, where it has been for a year, comes before council and is adopted, another bylaw authorizing the use of the new tickets will be prepared for adoption.

Then the order for the tickets will be placed.

ENOUGH LEFT
There is little danger that the city will run out of tickets for erring motorists before both bylaws are adopted, however. A city official explained that, though the supply was dwindling, there were still enough to go around.

Alarm at Fault

Gallery Guarded

BY ED CONGROVE

Extra guards have been on duty at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery because of faults in a trial burglar alarm system, it was disclosed at a meeting of the police commission yesterday.

The gallery is currently housing a $300,000 collection of 18th century art objects. Curator Colin Graham admitted that extra guarding precautions were being taken at the gallery due to faults in the present alarm system, installed on a trial basis.

The matter was raised yesterday at a meeting of police commissioners, who will ask for revisions and additions to warning devices used at the gallery.

Commissioner William Hamilton said the present warning system "would be satisfactory" if certain additions were installed.

Also needed is replacement of several minor electronic parts which have worn out. Mr. Graham said this would be carried out immediately.

Discussion of the warning system brought the comment from Commissioner Gordon Carter that acquiring an adequate system was the responsibility of the gallery, not the commission.

Mr. Graham said later the warning system was "generally regarded as the most up-to-date in the world."

He admitted several faults, adding that these were "purely matters of technical procedure—a matter of working out a method of operation that will not place a heavy burden on the police."

He said the warning device

yards here. Vessel is being built for commercial fisherman Frank Smith, 3918 Caddboro Bay Road. Completion date is April.—(Robin Clarke photo.)

'B.C. Denied Benefits'

Federal Subsidy System
Hit by City Fisherman

BY IAN STREET

A local shipyard spokesman yesterday attacked "discriminatory" federal subsidy regulations which he claimed deny B.C. fishermen benefits received by vessel owners in the Maritimes.

Capt. G. A. Veres, managing director of McKay-Cormack Ltd., said his yard is now engaged in building a 57-foot dragger which on the east coast would qualify for a sizable subsidy. Because it is being built for use in B.C. waters there is no federal subsidy, he said.

Frank Smith, 3918 Caddboro Bay Road, owner of the vessel, said the federal subsidy of $250 per gross ton which applies in the Maritimes would cut the $35,000 cost of the dragger by "almost $10,000" if it applied here.

"I was under the impression we would qualify for the federal subsidy when it was announced by Ottawa," said Mr. Smith. "But I've since discovered that in the eyes of the federal government we don't exist if we're west of the Rockies."

WE PAY TAXES

The commercial fisherman said: "It's not right we should be discriminated against. After all, we're in Canada and pay taxes to Ottawa the same as everyone else."

The dragger will be fitted with the latest radar and echosounding gear. It will have hydraulic steering and probably hydraulic winches as well to haul in nets from the sea bottom.

WIDER THAN NORMAL.

The Monk-designed hull is 17 feet eight inches in beam—about 2½ feet wider than the normal dragger of this size—to give it easy riding qualities to cope with the huge swells off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

READY IN APRIL.

Capt. Veres said at present 10 men are working on the dragger which is expected to be ready for fishing in April of next year.

The yard spokesman said the general outlook for winter work at McKay-Cormack is "fairly good" with other private fishboat jobs now in the negotiating stage and the prospect of some additional work for the federal government.

Bigger Wail Expected

Mayor Percy Scourrah is hopeful of improvement of the city's barely-audible civil defence sirens.

He was commenting on a major weakness exposed by Exercise Toccin B—few people could hear the sirens.

"There is no question but that the new sirens now being installed will be more effective than the ones we have, but I won't know how effective until I hear them," he said.

New Bus Lure

'Hall for Half-Price'
But City Plays SafeVictoria Reluctant
About Transit Gift

By TED SHACKLEFORD

Victoria is playing coy and safe in the web of negotiations surrounding the B.C. Power Commission's latest attempt to get rid of the Greater Victoria bus system.

This became apparent yesterday when the Colonist sought details of the power commission's latest approach to city hall.

NO AUTHORITY

The commission, it was learned, has offered to sell the B.C. Hydro building to Victoria for less than half its assessed value of $660,000—if the city also takes the bus system as a gift.

Lending urgency to the offer, from the commission's point of view, is the fact that the commission is due to assume responsibility for B.C. Electric services in Greater Victoria from Jan. 1 and has no authority to run a bus system.

GROUP INTERESTED

Also involved in the web of negotiations is Brig.-Gen. Timothy Manning of West Vancouver, representing a group of private investors interested in buying the bus system.

On the face of it, the city could accept the bus service as a gift from the power commission and resell it at a nice profit to Gen. Manning's group.

But even with a firm commitment to buy, on the part of Gen. Manning's group, the city is reluctant to take the transit gift.

CITY HAS DOUBTS

Before it was taken over by the provincial government, the B.C. Electric announced several times that the bus service in this area loses about $500,000 a year, and the city doubts that it can be made an economic proposition.

"If the private group bought the bus service from the city and later went broke trying to run it, then presumably the last owner would have to take on the job of continuing the service," a city council source explained yesterday.

"The city wants to make sure that the power commission is not taking a big risk."

Car Fall Blamed

A woman who was found seriously injured and unconscious in the parking lot of a city hotel early Sunday may have fallen from a moving car.

Mrs. Juanita Clark, 38, of 503 Admiral, found after a private party at the Ingham Hotel, is reported to have shown some improvement in St. Joseph's Hospital.

She suffered head injuries and bruises to the hands and knees.

'Rescind Survival Training'

The newly-formed Victoria Radiation Hazards Committee decided last night to call on Greater Victoria school board to rescind its recent decision to teach survival training and emphasize instead "positive efforts for peace." Committee members feel survival training will aid in the "psychological acceptance of the morality of nuclear warfare."

The only thing burning was the mother's face—but it does say something for the service provided by the telephone company.

THE ITEMIZER: Victoria's tourist boosters Sam Lane and William Hawkins seem to have taken all the glory in a big section on Victoria in the current National Geographic magazine. Playing second fiddle, as it were, are such items as the hanging flower baskets, tally-hos, and other assorted scenery. The piece is by Alan Phillips, entitled "Canada—My Country."

Too long-winded for Kiwanis, replied the other.

INSTANT ACTION: A family moved into a house on Transit Road the other day and the telephone was installed on Monday.

Yesterday morning the three-year-old of the house picked up the phone, dialled

the operator, shouted "Fire!" and hung up.

Within six minutes the first chief was at the door.

Refreshments that are ready in a jiffy are wonderful for holiday entertaining. Make the star-shaped jelled veal mold early in the day, pop it into the refrigerator, and it's ready to serve any time. The puff salad slices are easy to prepare and delicious.

Easy Luncheon Recipes For Holiday Parties

PUFF SALAD SLICES

Use your favorite recipe for puff pastry. A recipe calling for 2 cups of flour will make 4 slices, approximately 12" x 4". Place slices on baking tray and prick with fork. Bake 10 to 15 minutes at 425°F.

When baked spread with mixture of butter and mayonnaise. Sprinkle with chopped ham. Place 1/2 slice of hard-boiled egg down one side of strip and 1/2 slice of tomato down the other. Using a large star decorator, pipe cream cheese down centre and sprinkle with parsley.

JELLIED VEAL

One pound stewing veal, 1 bay leaf, strip of lemon rind, 1 1/2 tablespoons gelatine, 1 teaspoon parsley, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper.

Put veal in saucepan with 1 pint of water, bay leaf and lemon rind. Simmer for 1 1/2 to 2 hours, until cooked. Strain off 2 cups liquid and stir in gelatine. Chop the veal roughly, add to gelatine mixture with salt, pepper and parsley. When mixture is cold but not set, turn into a greased mold to set.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter went away to college in September. She is 18 and sensible. Her dad and I eagerly await her letters, as you can understand.

Yesterday she wrote: "My roommate and I had a great time Saturday night. We went to a shambles. My brother's daughter pounded 33 holes in her bedroom wall hanging up pictures of Fabian. The bathroom tile is cracked because their son produced a small explosion with a chemistry set. The lawn furniture is wrecked as it was left outside. Door knobs are missing and two windows are broken."

We asked them to please put the house back in shape. They said, "This is the owners' responsibility."

Why are relatives such pigs? Shall we sue?—VJ.

have like pigs, too. It's just worse when relatives do.

You should have had their promise in writing that they would leave the house in first class condition. Don't sue. It would be messy, expensive, and probably unavailing.

December Fours

Mr. and Mrs. P. South, 241 Beechwood Avenue, announce the engagement of their second daughter, Diane Margo, to Mr. Kenneth Lavorne Hamilton, second son of Mrs. A. Price, 516 Tait Street, and the late Mr. H. C. Hamilton. The wedding will take place Saturday, December 9, in Metropolitan United Church at 8 p.m. with Dr. F. E. H. James officiating. Mrs. L. Curtis will be matron of honor and Mr. Clare Hamilton, best man.

Mrs. Miriam Rogers, 3544 Savannah Avenue, wishes to announce the engagement of her only daughter, Sheila Marion, to Mr. Charles Richard South, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. South, 1286 Glyn Road. The wedding will take place on Friday, Dec. 15, with Rev. Stanley S. Sears officiating. Attendants will be Miss Carole Cruickshank and Mr. Jack Waters.

Attendants' Gowns Made by Bride

Four attendants in gowns of green velvet with pleated bell skirts, scoop necklines and short sleeves formed a charming coterie for bride, Miss Sheila-Jeanne Brown for her wedding recently to Mr. Robert Allan Graham.

The bride daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brown, 3380

Tennyson Avenue, made her attendants' gowns, which were complemented with shoes and gloves en tone, headresses of green velvet made by Mrs. Brown, and bouquets of bronze chrysanthemums.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Glenys Lister; bridesmaid, the bride's sister, Miss Christine Brown; bridesmaid, Miss Grace Graham, and junior bridesmaid, Miss Sandy Brown, sister of the bride. The bride's gown was of white silk organza fashioned with street-length skirt in bell shape extending to a fishtail effect at back. The scoop neckline was trimmed with lace appliques, which were repeated on the skirt front. Sleeves were short and long organza gloves extended to lily points. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and greenery. A coronet of seed pearls held her veil of tulle.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. David W. Graham, 1015 Tolmie Avenue, had Mr. Stan Diamond as best man. Ushers were Mr. Garth Graham, the groom's brother, and Mr. Norman Graham, the groom's cousin.

The wedding ceremony took place in Norway House with Rev. T. H. McAllister officiating. Baskets of chrysanthemums decorated Norway House on the occasion, and the reception which followed there, a three-tier wedding cake in white, topped with yellow rosebuds, centred the heart table. The bride's mother made the cake.

Leaving for a honeymoon trip to Portland, Ore., the bride wore a beige wool suit with fitted jacket and box-pleated skirt, worn with taupe and gold accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham will live at 1012 Oliphant Street.

Paris Sees Pink Spring

Despite one crisis after another, 50-megaton bombs and possible fallout, French fashion designers see 1962 through pink glasses. For next spring they predict a rosy future, at least fashionwise.

Pink, from a tender pale shade to a strong and shocking color, seems to be the new up-and-coming fashion.

Since buyers from the United States and Canada attended last week's shows in Paris and placed their orders, the ready-to-wear French styles complete with famous labels will soon be available in a price-range from $70 to $350.

While the definite New Look for next spring will only be set in Paris during the Haute Couture fashion week next January, these ready-to-wear

French styles are fore-runners of what we'll be seeing and wearing in 1962.

These styles designed by Jacques Heim, Maggy Rouff, Guy Laroche, Carven, Yves Jacques, Griffe, Jean Dessès, Madeleine de Rauch, Michel Goma and Nina Ricci had all short, and usually flaring, skirts just covering the knees.

They also underlined a natural and slim waistline, hinting that feminine forms and pretty legs will be de rigueur next spring.

And come spring, we seem to be in for another "think pink" period. The Paris designers are using pink tweed and pink jersey for daytime, pink linen and shantung for spring and summer suits and pink chiffon and pink lace for dressy 1962 Paris spring styles.

Are you watching your weight? Then your complexion needs extra care! Low fat diets, plus harsh weather and overheated rooms, rob skin of natural moisture. Result? Flaky patches, little lines, crow's feet. But with POND'S DRY SKIN CREAM you can maintain a reservoir of precious oils and moisture within the skin. This famous cream contains Allantoin—a substance that floats off lifeless surface cells, speeds deep penetration of Pond's moisturized lanolin. Dried-out, thirsty tissues in the skin's sub-surface are revitalized... and almost overnight, your complexion looks softer, smoother, younger. Use POND'S DRY SKIN CREAM regularly. No Compromise on Columbia Fiery Fulton Warns Bennett

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—The following is the complete text of the address given by Justice Minister Fulton to the Chamber of Commerce here last night on the Columbia issue:

I would like to deal briefly, but I hope thoroughly, with the controversy over the Columbia River treaty.

I am here to ask you as British Columbians and as Canadians to look to your own resources, to maximize their potential, in this province, and to safeguard them for your selves.

Future at Stake

I want to tell you, what I am sure you realize already, that the future of this province and the honor of this country is at stake.

The time has passed when it was enough to count on the passive sympathy of thinking men and women. The issues are so grave and the consequences so important that nothing less than the active, uncompromising, unqualified support of this province will suffice.

Is that too much to ask of the people of British Columbia? I think not.

It should not be necessary to have to restate the position of the government of Canada. But it is necessary, because that position has been subject to so much speculation and second guessing and even distortion, especially within the last few days, that it may have become obscured by propaganda.

Position Unchanged

Our position has not changed. We have signed a treaty, which had the consent of the province of British Columbia, which will ensure this province a continuous supply of inexpensive power for generations to come. That treaty has been signed by the prime minister of Canada and the president of the United States. It confers certain benefits on both countries.

We will not permit it to become a one-way proposition. That would not be a compromise. That would be a sellout.

I do not propose to waste your time and mine by dealing specifically with all the innuendo, with the calculated "leaks" with the propaganda plays that we have seen since last I spoke on this subject in British Columbia.

No Cabinet 'Split'

Let me simply state in the clearest, most unequivocal terms that our position has not changed and that we do not contemplate any change. There is no "split" in the cabinet—certainly not in the federal cabinet, at any rate.

British Columbians now are approaching a crossroads. At the crossroads a great decision will have to be made. Will British Columbia sell one of its great natural resources to the Americans or will it be preserved for use at home?

We all know where the Bennett government, together with certain power and industrial interests in the United States now stand. It is their intention to entice us into a quick sale for a long term.

This pressure and this propaganda campaign now have gone into high gear.

Strong Words

We now hear even the United States secretary of the Interior, Stuart Udall, assuring us that our misgivings are "stiff and nonsense." Pretty strong words for a U.S. cabinet minister talking about Canadian affairs.

'Jet-Propelled Propaganda Juggernaut' Blamed for Squeeze Play with the U.S.

Udall is reported as going further: As saying he is confident that the Canadian government will permit sale of our rights to power under the Columbia River treaty. Secretary Udall knows what our stand has been—it has been no secret, yet he presumes to forecast a change in our policy.

Why the pressure play? Because he hopes for a decision that will be an enormous advantage to his country.

What Talks?

Secretary Udall is reported as going further again—as saying "we have been talking officially to Ottawa, and talking with Mr. Bennett on the side. What talks with Ottawa?"

In any talks with us it has been made perfectly clear to the Americans that Ottawa does not countenance this sale of our entitlement to Columbia power to their country. No doubt the second part of his statement gives a more accurate impression.

Pattern Repeated

It is suggested that other American officials are lending the Bennett plan their support. And why not? What they failed to get at the negotiating table now is being offered them by Mr. Bennett on a platter without regard to British Columbia's real interests.

The Americans haven't been offered such a windfall since the purchase of Manhattan Island, unless, of course it was the Bennett-Kaiser deal the federal government stopped in 1954.

Now the pattern is repeating itself and the sellout will have to be prevented again. Of course American government and other officials are hoping that Ottawa will adopt this policy. Of course Mr. Bennett is using this as a squeeze play, but Canadian government policy is still made in Ottawa, not in Washington and Victoria as Mr. Bennett would like to see it.

What a Summit?

Canadian government policy will continue to serve Canada's best interests, not those of the United States.

What about the Bennett propaganda campaign? You will meet Bennett at the crossroads too. His pitch dovetails neatly with that of the American interests. He even pretends, without actually saying so, that he has the support of the U.S. president.

You remember the reports of a secret meeting behind closed doors—a summit parley on the Columbia at a $100-a-plate Democratic Party fund-raising dinner in Seattle.

What an odd place to choose for an attempt to formulate Canadian or even B.C. policy on the Columbia River. What a summit parley!

Zig-Zag Path

It turns out it was little more than a rendezvous at a reception line—a fleeting handshake and, naturally enough, a polite word.

But how the Bennett propaganda juggernaut has blown this up. It's not surprising though. The juggernaut—jet-propelled by hot air—has rolled along in this way since last March. And what an extraordinary zigzag path.

First it was the cost estimate controversy—remember that? That particular gun was spiked by Bennett's own independent engineering consultants, as well as by sure. But Bennett has shown an abiding fondness for that old muzzle loader. He rolled it out as late as last September, dusted it off, and fired again.

Libby Inevitable

He told you that Columbia power would cost 6.35 mills. He fired and ducked, hoping that in the confusion that followed nobody would be able to pin him down.

Another Bennett dodge concerned the Libby dam. He has gone up and down this province trying to sell the proposition that this was an Ottawa giveaway.

The fact is that Libby was inevitable once the Bennett government vetoed dams on the Kootenay River. I refer to Bull River, Dorr—the Luxor subdivision, which, together with Mica, the federal negotiators of the treaty would have preferred.

The Americans need Libby, or similar dams in Canada, not only to produce power for both of us but to save lives by cutting the danger of disastrous floods. And I think this is one thing they are entitled to.

The Bennett juggernaut even tried to roll over the treaty itself, to discredit the terms Bennett's own minister, the Hon. Ray Williston, had worked out with us during a year of hard work and splendid co-operation.

Why the Change?

You are told we are trying to ram this treaty down the throats of an unwilling British Columbia. What a monstrous proposition.

The B.C. government helped make the treaty. The B.C. government endorsed the treaty. The B.C. government is primarily responsible for many of its most important terms.

Why the abrupt change about the treaty?

Why did the Bennett government cast out its own creation?

Because Premier Bennett fell for one of the slickest sales talks ever made by the Americans? Maybe. Because after the treaty was signed he saw he could improve his political image by picking a quarrel with Ottawa? Maybe.

Because ambition and lust for power drove him on from scheme to promise until he had undertaken to build double the number of power projects required for British Columbia's needs? Again a possibility.

Hard Fact

Because of an abiding interest in the development of the north? I think not.

The Peace was never advanced as a substitute for the Columbia or as a factor affecting the agreed policy of the treaty negotiators regarding the capture of our power by Mr. Bennett, or by Mr. Williston, or by Mr. Bonner during the dozens of conferences and negotiating sessions during which we worked with the British Columbia team so closely and so effectively.

The hard fact is that British Columbians now are being asked to sell abroad our best and cheapest power resource. Like it or not you have to face it that this would leave us with more expensive power to use at home.

Improved Chances

Why did the Bennett government and the federal government set the treaty up on the basis that we should get back 50 per cent of the power generated in the United States?

PREMIER BENNETT
... full of dodges

Because we knew that this was the cheapest power British Columbia will ever get anywhere.

Because we knew that this meant better chances of British Columbia competing in Canadian and world markets.

Because we knew that this improved our chances of getting new industries, creating more permanent jobs—not temporary construction jobs. Permanent industrial jobs.

Because we knew that British Columbia needed this kind of economic advantage to help in building a mature economy.

Not Good Enough

We have been in the economic backwoods long enough. We exist by shipping our natural resources out to the great population centres to the south, and this well suits those who have grown rich in the process. But it's not good enough for the great majority who haven't. We must expand our economy and our population.

By selling out one of our most valuable economic assets on a 30- to 60-year basis we raise another obstacle. We have enough obstacles to overcome now. Let's not build more.

Canada Opposed

We need a power grid in this province—to link the coast, the Okanagan, the Cariboo and the Kootenays in one network. The treaty as we have set it up achieves this. The Bennett plan makes sure that the transmission lines go just one way—south.

The treaty plan will see Revelstoke, Trail, Kamloops, Penticton, Merritt, the Fraser Valley and Vancouver, as well as other points joined in one great power grid—providing cheap power over an enormous area.

Canada is opposed to the sellout of the power we are entitled to under the treaty.

Canada is opposed to long-term contracts tying up Columbia downstream benefits. This would confer an enormous benefit on the Americans. But we are not prepared to permit that at the expense of British Columbia.

It Won't Work

The Bennett-United States squeeze play won't work. The power sellout has to be resisted.

The Americans have their fair share under the treaty now. We cannot allow Mr. Bennett to hand them our share too.

We have signed a treaty with the Americans. The terms are clear and unequivocal. They are obliged to return an enormous block of power to use free at Oliver, British Columbia.

The British Columbia government agreed that this was not only a fair sharing of benefits with the United States; they also agreed that this was a great advantage to British Columbia. On this basis, and with this understanding, the prime minister of Canada signed the treaty with the president of the United States.

We Will Insist

It is the federal government's intention to see that we live up to our commitments. We will insist on the Americans living up to theirs—as no doubt they will.

On this basis let us ratify the treaty as soon as possible and on this basis let the financial discussions resume in that same spirit of co-operation that made the treaty negotiations so successful.

We are proud of the cordial and co-operative relations that have existed between Canada and the United States.

I am convinced that there has not been, in recent years, a more striking example of

First, face the problem with the knowledge that thousands of people are helped every year by trained hearing consultants. People today "stop advertising their deafness" by using a hearing aid.

Second, don't wait to do something about a hearing problem. It can grow progressively worse. In fact, if you wait too long the problem can become hopeless. Now is the time to have a thorough scientific Audiometer Hearing Test.

Third, realize that good hearing is a necessity. It is vital to your job, to keep in contact with friends, to protect yourself from unseen but audible dangers.

If your hearing test shows that you need a hearing aid it is truly an intelligent purchase. Your friends and associates will appreciate your consideration.

We offer an accurate Audiometric Test to assure complete satisfaction.

Woman's Tears Flow As Tale of Accident Unfolds Before Jury

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury probing the Saturday night traffic death of 33-year-old Mrs. Grace Powley.

Mrs. Powley, 741 Discovery, was pronounced dead at St. Joseph's Hospital after she was struck by the car driven by Mrs. Edith Lee, 1321 Myrtle, at Discovery and Douglas.

Mrs. Lee wept as she recounted to the jury the details of the accident.

She said she never saw the woman crossing the street. "All of a sudden I heard a thump beside my car."

She explained the glare of the oncoming car lights or the windshield support frame post may have prevented her from seeing Mrs. Powley.

An earlier witness testified that despite dry weather and good visibility at the corner, the streets gave off a wetish sheen.

Evidence showed the Lee car was travelling about 25 miles an hour at the time of the accident. Mrs. Powley's body was carried about two car-lengths from the sidewalk after she was struck.

Dr. Garth Walter testified many women Mrs. Powley's age had survived similar injuries, but not when they were in Mrs. Powley's physical condition.

Lighting at the intersection was described as "adequate" by witnesses and police officers who investigated the accident.

Crockery, at Last!

U.S. Army Innovation Old History in Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian soldiers are coming up on their American comrades in arms in at least one department—they've never had to eat from tin plates in their messes.

OFFICIALS ASTONISHED

Canadian Army officials Tuesday greeted with astonishment a decision by the United States Army to feed its soldiers in mess halls from dinnerware instead of metal trays.

A U.S. Army statement said the switch was aimed at providing a more "homelike atmosphere in mess halls."

"Good night! This has been the policy of the Canadian Army since before the Second World War," one army officer said.

"Our records show that crockery was even used in army messes during the Northwest Rebellion. The Americans seem to be just catching up to us."

Impaired Driving Charge Dismissed

A charge of impaired driving against a provincial government accountant was dismissed by Magistrate William Oatley in Saanich police court yesterday.

He dismissed the charge against E. Leighton McMicking, 1647 Ross, on the basis of evidence presented by the defence that the accused was actually suffering from a mild concussion when examined by police after an accident Oct. 18.

Mr. McMicking admitted in court he had had three drinks of rye prior to the accident. He said he was momentarily

Few TB Refugees Still in Sanatoria

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Of 325 tubercular refugees admitted to Canada during World Refugee Year, only a comparative handful still remain in sanatoria, the United Nations was told yesterday.

Canadian delegate Mrs. Jean Cammellman outlined the plan under which the Canadian government brought in three groups of tubercular refugees from European camps.

High Court Rejects U.S. Firms' Appeal

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday rejected argument by two United States companies that the National Energy Board exceeded its jurisdiction in granting a Canadian pipeline company authority to build a 53.7-mile long oil pipeline in Manitoba.

Five members of the court, headed by Chief Justice Patrick Kerwin, upheld the board's decision in a judgment from the bench. There will be no reasons for judgment.

The court rejected an appeal against the board's decision by the Soo Railroad Company and Great Northern Pipe Line Company, which is linked with the Great Northern Railroad.

New Parking Lot?

R. L. Heath, 945 Kings, yesterday applied to city hall for a permit to construct a parking lot at 421 Parry Street, between Michigan and Toronto Streets in James Bay.

In a letter to city council, Mr. Heath explained he wants to demolish a condemned building at 421 Parry and put in a surfaced parking lot.

'Mild Cholera' Fatal To 147 Filipinos

MANILA (UPI)—The Philippine news service reports that 147 persons have died in an outbreak of "mild cholera," or "mild cholera," in sweeping Samar province in the southeastern Philippines.

Talk on Policy

An outline of United States policy in the Western Hemisphere will be given by Hayden Raynor, U.S. consul-general, Vancouver, at 8 p.m. Thursday at 941 Pandora Avenue. The meeting is sponsored by the Current Affairs Council of Greater Victoria.

Gambling Attacked

CALGARY (CP)—Gambling should be more strictly enforced, but Ald. Starr had an alternative.

"If there is any evil, it should be on top and not forced underground," he said.

He said one man lost $1,500 in two hours in one of the clubs where drinks are brought to gambling members "until they don't know what they're doing."

PICKED UP

He also said players are picked up from a downtown private club and taken to certain addresses.

But Ald. Starr defended "gambling in Chinatown." Many old Chinese with nothing else to do—whose wives are still in Canton—"should not be hounded," he said.

DENIES GAMBLING

Ald. Don McIntosh, who manages the Cecil Hotel and is former manager of the National Hotel, denied gambling took place in either.

Ald. Roy Farran suggested the law against gambling

Ex-Nazi Admits Spying For 'Cowardly' U.S.

KIEV, Soviet Union (AP)—A former member of Nazi Germany's Waffen SS and his sobbing wife pleaded guilty here to charges of spying for the United States.

Adolf Werner, 31, of Karlsruhe, West Germany, acknowledged his guilt, but he said he had actually done almost nothing for the Americans. He attempted to portray the Americans as the villains of the whole affair.

"The Americans," he told a military court, "are too cowardly to carry out such a deed themselves."

Werner, who was a staff sergeant with the Waffen SS, the front-line military organization of the Nazi elite guard, and his 45-year-old wife, Hermina, came to the Soviet Union as tourists.

Werner defended her stoutly. He said she thought he was working for a U.S. publishing company which wanted him to do illustrated magazine articles on the Soviet Union.

India Strengthens Outposts In Face of Chinese Attacks

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Prime Minister Nehru has disclosed that India has accused Communist China of fresh aggression on India's northern frontier. He said India would protect its territory by "warfare" if necessary.

Nehru released to parliament the text of a note sent to Peking charging that Communist Chinese troops were strengthening their military positions in Ladakh—bordering Tibet—where 10 Indians were killed in a border clash two years ago.

In answer to questions from members of parliament Nehru said India had strengthened its own position in the area, establishing half a dozen military posts with "bases behind them."

There will be a silver collection with all proceeds going to the Sixty-and-Up Club.

Trial Judge Criticized

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Appeal Court Justice said Monday certain statements by a man twice convicted of murder and later acquitted should not have been admitted at his trial.

Mr. Justice T. G. Norris of the British Columbia Court of Appeal was giving reasons for Charles Heathman's acquittal on a charge of murder in the death of 10-year-old Donald Oliver in a Vernon Park Sept. 2, 1960.

He said the trial judge in his instruction to the jury should have detailed the circumstances under which Heathman's statements were taken.

"This was a vital misdirection."

Fantastic Insect Plague

Mysterious Myriads Fill New Zealand Sky

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Fantastic plagues of midges have descended on the Auckland suburb of Māngere in swarms so thick they are reported to have blotted out the sun.

Residents of the area sweep up the bodies of the gnat-like insects by the barrowload, but still new clouds of them arrive.

Just how and why the plague has arisen is a hotly argued point. But really bitter complaints date from the opening of a $40,000,000 drainage scheme for Auckland with headquarters in the Māngere district.

MYRIADS FLYING

Drainage experts say there have always been swarms of midges in Māngere. Residents claim the oxidation ponds of the drainage works are breeding grounds for midges.

F. L. A. Gotz, New Zealand minister for internal affairs, who is MP for Māngere, says: "The setting sun is sometimes completely obliterated by midges in their myriads flying at heights of up to 500 feet."

"Then they descend in swarms, attracted to lights. It is virtually unbelievable."

GET INTO FOOD

"One shopkeeper gathered a wheelbarrow full of them. They get into food, into ice chests, into eyes and mouths."

"You eat them. You breathe them. You drink them. Last Christmas I found that if one drank a glass of water, or anything stronger, there were inevitably midges in it."

BEGAN WORKING

Midges have always existed, Gotz said, but never in the explosive quantities that appeared after the drainage ponds began working.

The government has sprayed various kinds of insecticides. Stocking of ponds with fish has been studied.

Scientists have experimented with introducing quantities of sea water into the oxidation ponds.

STRONGER STRAINS

Some householders claim attempts at eradication have only bred stronger strains. They say midges now do not die with the coming of morning as their predecessors did last season.

WHAT YOU LIKE

More than his newfound wealth, Jaanimets said his greatest delight—one that he hasn't quite gotten used to—is just doing what you like, saying what you like, going where you like.

Royal Canadian Mint Was Rarely Busier

OTTAWA (CP) — The new Ontario sales tax and coin-gobbling vending machines are making this one of the busiest years on record for the Royal Canadian Mint.

The demand for coins has increased, but it will be met and there is no need to hoard against a possible shortage, a mint official said.

Crews at the castle-like mint where all Canada's coins are made are working round the clock to meet the demand for pennies created by the three-per-cent Ontario sales tax that went into effect Sept. 1.

So far this year production of one-cent pieces has reached 65,500,000, an increase of 13 per cent over the corresponding period last year.

Pennies are being produced at the rate of 1,000,000 a day to meet the increased demand, but the demand for other coins, especially nickels, has also risen—and is being met.

The mint last year produced a record 37,000,000 nickels to meet a shortage. Production so far this year has gone over that figure.

HOME BANKS

One reason for the shortage is the habit of some people of dumping small coins in a drawer or home bank, thus taking them out of circulation.

But don't get "in a panic and start hoarding" money, said the official. Keep it in circulation and there won't be any shortage.

New Menace in Britain

Glis Glis Eats More Wool Than Any Pack of Moths

By WALTER LOGAN
UPI Correspondent

Tailor and Cutter, the authoritative trade journal of the British clothing industry, has warned British males of a new danger to their trousers—the Central European Glis glis, which can eat more wool than a pack of moths.

The Glis glis really is a small furry rodent usually referred to as the squirrel dormouse. An English banker once reported some as pets and they escaped to become a menace to trousers and a boon to the clothing industry.

Tailor and Cutter told of a Hertfordshire fireman who put on his uniform, hung his best suit in the closet and raced off to fight a fire. When he returned some time later he found the furry little Glis glis had devoured the trouser legs.

If the Glis glis attacks this year he will have a new British product called "The Shape" to chew on. "The Shape" was unveiled at the Dorchester Hotel in London.

It departs from the old "Tub" look and is designed to shape the man as he would like to be—broad shoulders, a manly chest and the trim waist and hips of an athlete.

But, in line with London's determination to be for the men's fashion world what Paris is for the women's, there are no gimmicks, no fancy trimmings. Just plain impeccable taste.

Here's the rundown on 1962 British men's wear:

Suits: Shoulders remain natural. Some slight suppression at the waist. Lapels slightly wider, more shaped, slightly rolled. Chest tapering into defined waist, shoulders slightly forward. Front of coat curved gently from centre button.

Trousers: Slimmer. Single pleat each side, tapered legs to narrow plain buttons. Pockets more angled to give greater freedom of movement. Trend toward self-supporting trousers. Sports trousers trim, straight-hanging to give height. Fabrics include gabardines and feather-weight worsteds. Colors from light blue and sand to stronger color.

Vests: Generous. Sleeves narrow, tapering slightly to cuff. Pockets of good size. Some blues and greys in town-wear. Traditional Scottish and English checks in brighter colors on traditional background.

Double-breasted models are likely to come in but single-breasted still are number one. A new feature is the one-button double-breasted jacket. Some jackets have two deep side vents. Slim lapels and narrower space buttons across the jacket.

Knitwear: Trend toward lightness. Shirt and cardigan combinations popular. Considerable interest in new textures and "decorated" look.

Ties: Classical motifs in dark rich color combinations to go with more virile suit appearance. Some with square ends and slimmer shapes to harmonize with narrow lapels. Foul-ards still best seller. Thistle-shaped silk bow ties popular.

Hats: Brims very much narrower (1 1/2 inches to 2). Crowns more tapered. Bands slightly wider. Unorthodox colors, including blues. Tweed hats and caps strong. Fancy bands on even plain felts.

Shoes: Narrow. Toes square. Generally lighter and more flexible. More interest in silpoms with long plain fronts. Colors run to nutty browns. New materials include fighting seal and Brazilian buck.

Topcoats: Neater, more elegant and formal. Man-about-town topcoats in shorter length. Raincoats: Cotton topcoats with clean uncluttered lines. Rich linings. Light through dark muted colors.

Track Down Killers

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Sooner or later, every plant in our gardens must die, even as you and I. When, for one reason or another, one of our favorite perennials or perhaps a treasured shrub or tree passes away, the impulse is strong to replace it immediately with another of the same kind, which isn't at all a good idea.

Before doing any replacement planting, some effort should be made to find out what caused the death of the original plant, for there is every likelihood the new plant will go the same way as the old.

Was it disease? If so, was the disease soil-borne? Are the disease-causing organisms lurking in the soil, ready to infect the new plant? This happens, and fairly frequently.

Michaelmas daisies, for instance, may succumb to verticillium wilt, a disease brought about by a fungus which infects and invades from the soil, and another Michaelmas daisy just bugged into the same hole is almost certain to come down with wilt. This is on a par with planting cabbages on a plot foul with the club root fungus organism—it is just asking for trouble.

There also are pests that are soil-borne, lurking in the ground awaiting the planting of the right kind of host plant. What could be sweeter for a chrysanthemum grower, for instance, than to have a fresh, tender young chrysanthemum plant served up on a platter, so to speak. This particular pest isn't too fussy as to its diet, though, and if chrysanthemum stems are not forthcoming, it won't turn up its nose at dahlias, asters or delphiniums. Even with no host plant at all, chrysanthemum nematode can survive for three years in the soil.

There are soil sterilants available such as Vapam which can be used for killing off all life in a vacant patch of soil—nematodes, grubs, fungus spores and even weed seeds—but these chemicals are rather hard to come by and some are dangerous to use. While nothing like as effective as Vapam, I find I can do a pretty good clean-up job on any hole in the ground simply by drenching it with a household disinfectant such as Creolin, Creocile, Black Disinfectant, Jeyes Fluid or Lysol, two tablespoons per gallon of water. Don't replant until spring, to give the fumes of the disinfectant a chance to dissipate.

Quite apart from pests and diseases, however, it is never wise to replace a casualty with the same kind of plant, for the soil is apt to be aster-sick, chrysanthemum-sick or some other kind of sick. Just what causes this species sickness isn't too well understood; no doubt it is due in part to the original plant taking up the particular combination of nutrients which will be needed by its replacement, but it is more than that. One theory has it that the roots excrete chemical substances that have an inhibiting effect on the roots of their successors.

This is notoriously true of peonies and roses, and to a lesser degree of cane fruits, tree fruits, ornamental shrubs and strawberries. With roses in particular, when an old-timer gives up the ghost for no more reason than old age or a spell of hard weather, it is a big temptation to bung a new one in the same place, for in a small garden, you don't have too much choice of planting sites, but such replacements are almost certain to turn miffy and sulk.

The trick here is to dig out the soil for a distance well beyond the normal rooting radius and replace it with fresh, clean loam taken from a portion of the garden which has never grown roses. Even then, it is wise to leave the hole open until spring, to let the frost, rain and weather get in their healing licks.

Jet-Age Interpreters

Joes Break Sound Barrier

VANCOUVER — One of Canada's most unique husband-and-wife teams, Mr. and Mrs. Chong Joe of Canadian Pacific Airlines, share an unusual specialized talent — the ability to speak obscure Chinese dialects.

Chong and Shirley Joe use their skills in ancient languages in a jet age atmosphere at Vancouver International Airport, Canada's gateway to the Orient. On call 24 hours a day, they make sure that Chinese passengers flying into Vancouver aboard CPA planes need have no worries over linguistic problems. "Imagine yourself landing in Outer Mongolia, or perhaps Tibet, and you'll be able to realize something of the language difficulties facing non-English speaking Chinese arriving in Canada," says Mr. Joe.

"Arranging simple details like customs and immigration documentation, on-going reservations, and even booking hotel rooms, are next to impossible for people who can't speak English. This is where my wife and I come in."

Chong, a native of Victoria, and Shirley, born in Vancouver, have both been to Hong Kong, but they've never set foot on the Chinese mainland. Both, however, speak excellent Cantonese, which they learned from their parents. While on the job they've encountered a wide variety of amusing and puzzling situations as well as picking up key phrases in a number of Chinese dialects, including Mandarin, the prevalent tongue used on the Chinese mainland—both today, and in ancient times.

Shirley and Chong have united Chinese brides with fiancés they've never seen, ordered meals for royalty, helped organize a Hong Kong U.S. orphan airlift, and traced every possible article from a runaway bride to lost handbags.

"Speaking of brides," says Shirley, "the girls we call 'C.O.D. spouses' are our most interesting passengers."

"Fairly frequently we introduce girls from Hong Kong to prospective husbands they've never laid eyes on," she explained. "This is not too amazing when you consider the large number of love-lorn

Chinese swains in Canada who are unable to find brides in this country.

"When the couples first meet," she added, "they usually just shyly and silently shake hands — Chinese consider embracing in public most undignified."

At the Vancouver airport Chong and Shirley have plenty of opportunities to meet passengers other than Chinese. And lately, Shirley has been learning key phrases in German, Dutch and Italian. Between times she occasionally changes diapers and mixes formulas for harassed mothers, steers elderly ladies through the maze of Canadian customs, and apologizes to male travelers for the lack of an airport bar.

But the Joes' specialty is ordering meals by remote control.

"They regularly accompany Chinese passengers to restaurants and hotels, but sometimes, when a flight stays overnight and no one in the hotel speaks a passenger's language, they attend to all his needs by telephone, translating menus and laundry instructions, timetables and costs."

On the rare occasions when the Joes and a distressed passenger can't find a common dialect, Shirley and Chong resort to what they call "finger and toes," an elaborate pantomime they have worked out to cover emergencies.

"In our job, a little sign language and big smile work wonders," says Chong.

Fellini on 'Love Voyage'

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Famed director Federico Fellini has found his next picture—"Voyage of Love." This is the sequel to his very successful "La Dolce Vita," which left something unsaid, "I was told. The new film will say it." Marcello Mastroianni will be the star again, but not with Anita Ekberg.

Jackie Gleason's representative tells me Jackie was asked to take over the Jack Paar NBC show when Paar quits in the spring. Apart from the grueling labor involved, Gleason said no thanks, he still has 10 years to go on his CBS deal.

Andrew Turnbull's book on F. Scott Fitzgerald will be published by Scribner's in March.

John Huston describes his "Freud" film as "A picture of a man thinking. All the action is behind the eyeballs."

I'm wondering when the Screen Actors Guild will take a position on the "Runaway" productions — those made abroad. It's a delicate situation because so many members of SAG prefer to work abroad.

Italian censorship is like this. They won't pass anything that is not in the Ten Commandments. The lady can be half nude but not all nude. And if the couple is acting suggestively, they must be married or must go to be married.

Garden Show Doomed If Cash Not Raised

Without financial support, the annual spring garden festival, held for the past 30 years by Victoria Horticultural Society, will cease to exist.

Secretary George A. Wiggan said last night the society is a non-profit organization was not prepared to risk the cost of advertising necessary to attract patrons. CPR's cutting of the Vic-

Bette Davis and Margaret Leighton will be doing some counting when their "Night of the Iguana" comes to Broadway. They are solving the billing problem by one star being on top one night, the other the next. And the printer had better be right.

"Cleopatra" statistics department: 6,000 pairs of shoes were bought for the people in the picture; this does not include the principals. There are 800 in the cast, not counting extras. The hotel bill in Rome for 20th-Fox players and personnel will come to $500,000.

Didn't Know Secrets Says Fleming

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming denied Tuesday he knew the contents of Britain's "secret speech" when he called on Prime Minister Macmillan in London nine days ago to ask for its full text.

A report in The Guardian of Manchester to this effect was "a gross fabrication," Mr. Fleming said. (See Guardian story, page 3.)

Foulkes Points Out:

Reds Can Seal Berlin Without Force

An effective blockade of West Berlin by the Soviet Union without the use of armed force can be accomplished if carefully planned, Gen. Charles Foulkes told Victoria Kiwanis Club yesterday.

The initiative to use force would then be up to the West, said the retired chief of Canadian army general staff.

"Bridges could be closed for repairs or actually taken down, railways could be stopped for repairs to the right-of-way, air control beacons could be jammed by the local radio stations and anti-aircraft missile units could carry out firing exercises in the air corridors."

HALTED AT BRIDGE

The general said it would be a formidable task to keep open a route 110 miles through East German territory. Army garrisons would have to be stationed along the route. Even then any armored column could be stopped at the first bridge which was taken out.

Scientists Survive Radioactive Diet

LONDON (Reuters)—Three scientists Tuesday ended a month of living on a diet of food and drink deliberately poisoned by radioactive fallout and said they feel perfectly fit.

They would have been happy to continue indefinitely if the menu had not been so dull, they said.

The three men were Dr. J. F. Loutit, Dr. G. E. Harrison and T. E. F. Carr of the British Medical Council's radiobiological research unit at Harwell.

The bulk of the scientists' diet consisted of bread made from grain grown on land sprayed with radioactive strontium 90 and of milk from cows injected with a solution of strontium 85.

As a result of their experiment they said they are satisfied no one need fear the radioactivity which is expected to fall next spring from Russia's recent bomb explosions.

Chancellor

First woman chancellor of University of British Columbia is Mrs. Frank M. Ross, wife of the former B.C. lieutenant-governor. In first election for office in school's 47-year history, ballots were cast by 9,948 UBC graduates all over the world.

UN Raps South Africa

The officials, George Ivan Smith and Brian Urquhart, were forced outside and beaten with rifle butts. Their attackers were described as "crazed gendarmes and para-commandos."

Acting Secretary General Thant ordered UN officials in Katanga to lodge a protest "in the strongest terms against this inhuman treatment." He said the officials should demand public apologies by responsible Katanga officials and "severe punishment for those responsible."

TEMPORARY CHIEF

Smith is temporarily in charge of UN affairs in Katanga during the absence of Dr. Conor Cruise O'Brien. Urquhart is assistant to Dr. Sture Linner, officer in charge of the UN operation in the Congo.

The United Nations said the two officials had attended a reception for Dadd at the U.S. consulate in Elisabethville. Then they left for a diplomatic residence for a dinner in honor of the visiting senator.

The two officials were first accosted by Katangan troops in their car en route to the dinner, the announcement said. They talked their way out, however, and proceeded to the dinner.

DRAGGED FROM HOUSE

Later the gendarmes and para-commandos dragged Smith and Urquhart out of the house and beat them with rifle butts, the announcement said.

Smith managed to escape, but Urquhart "literally was kidnapped" for a while, but was later released on intervention of Katangan officials.

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—"Crazed" Katangan troops in Elisabethville last night invaded a dinner party being held for visiting U.S. Senator Thomas Dodd and his wife and dragged away two high UN officials, it was announced here.

Udall 'Presuming' Change in Policy

PRINCE GEORGE—In a long-awaited major Columbia River policy speech last night Justice Minister Davie Fulton unleashed a verbal barrage against a U.S. cabinet member, a scathing attack on Premier Bennett and termed B.C.'s power sale proposal a "sell-out."

He told a board of trade audience that the Conservative government's policy on the Columbia has not changed and denied it has precipitated a federal cabinet split.

Major points made by Mr. Fulton were:

- British Columbia's proposal to sell Columbia downstream benefits to the United States would be a "sellout" of provincial resources.
- Ottawa's policy against power export has not changed.
- The Bennett government "together with certain power and industrial interests in the United States" is trying to "entice us into a quick sale for a long-term period."
- A pressure and propaganda campaign to force Ottawa into approving sale of downstream benefits has "gone into high gear."

U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall has used "pretty strong words for a U.S. cabinet minister talking about Canadian affairs" and "presumes to forecast a change in our policy."

Premier Bennett "pretends without actually saying so that he has the support of the U.S. President."

Reception-Line Talk

● Seattle power talks between Premier Bennett and President John Kennedy were "little more than a rendezvous at a reception line."

● Columbia power is the cheapest British Columbia will ever get anywhere.

● Downstream benefits should be retained in British Columbia "to help in building a mature economy" and to create permanent industrial jobs.

● United States, under the terms of the Columbia treaty, already receives a fair share of development benefits and "we cannot allow Mr. Bennett to hand them our share too."

● To exchange the present Columbia arrangement "for a penny-wise and pound-foolish agreement . . . would be sheer madness."

● Premier Bennett has shown "a full measure of his partisanship and showmanship, his gamesmanship and one-upmanship . . . I invite him now to show some statesmanship."

Mr. Fulton, speaking in calm, calculated fashion and displaying little outward emotion, talked for 65 minutes, then submitted to 45 minutes of questioning from the floor where 230 persons sat paying close attention to his remarks.

Reasonable Settlement

Mr. Fulton said the federal government is prepared to negotiate and discuss the Columbia development with the B.C. government toward any reasonable settlement of the present stalemate.

"But we are not prepared to compromise the principles we have outlined," he said, making it clear that these principles are based on the treaty's provision for return to Canada, as it needs them, its share of the downstream benefit power in power and not in cash.

During the question period he said the B.C. government has the moral obligation, if not the legal obligation, to proceed with the Columbia River development under terms of the international treaty.

The federal government was not opposed to the development of the Peace River project, in which Prince George has a vital interest, but this project had certain problems which must be solved by the person responsible for creating them.

He said these problems were of cost and markets and that it was Premier Bennett's responsibility to resolve them.

Avoided the Peace

Mayor Garvin Deseil of Prince George rose during the question period and thanked Mr. Fulton for his detail on the Columbia but said he effectively avoided the Peace and then said he felt development of the Columbia was development of only a portion of B.C. while development of the Peace was development of all of the province.

Mr. Fulton, in replying, reiterated that Ottawa does not oppose development of the Peace but that B.C. has a moral obligation as a party to the international treaty to go ahead with the Columbia.

DAVIE FULTON
... Bennett challenged

Fantastic Blunder —Bonner

By TERRY HAMMOND

Canadian Justice Minister Davie Fulton's slam-barn attack on B.C.'s Columbia River plans last night was later termed a "fantastic blunder" by Attorney-General Robert Bonner.

Referring to Mr. Fulton's references to U.S. cabinet member Stewart Udall the attorney-general said, "why the Canadian minister of justice should choose Prince George as the stage from which to berate the interior secretary of the United States is one of the political mysteries of the year."

INCREDIBLE GAFFE

He said Mr. Fulton's speech in Prince George was only remarkable for being "an incredible gaffe" because it "completely ignores Clause 8 of the international treaty which specifically provides for the sale to the U.S. of Canadian (downstream benefit) entitlement."

The speech, he said, "fails to reveal to the people of this province that during treaty negotiations there was a firm understanding between B.C. and Ottawa that the sale of downstream benefits to the United States would be firmly agreed upon before ratification of the treaty by Canada."

Mr. Bonner said he himself insisted on this provision during treaty negotiations.

RISE ABOVE IT

He was critical of Mr. Fulton for delivering his speech on the eve of expected Columbia talks between Premier Bennett and federal Finance Minister Donald Fleming but said he is sure the principals "will rise above it."

Premier Bennett last night declined to comment on Mr. Fulton's charges and refused to read a text of the Prince George speech.

Fulton Denies Power Compromise

PRINCE GEORGE (CPI)—A report the federal government might agree to a compromise on the question of letting British Columbia sell some of its Columbia power rights to the U.S. was given a "complete and unqualified" denial last night by Justice Minister Fulton.

Toys Take Trip for 500 Fund

As in years past, The Daily Colonist 500 Christmas Fund has become a rallying point for many public spirited groups in the city dedicated to perpetuating the meaning of the holiday.

A toy donated to the Kinsmen Giant Bingo slated for Memorial Arena on Monday will not only help the fund but will provide some fun for the giver as well.

Turning the toy in at the door entitles the donor to a ticket on the turkeys put up for raffle by the Kinsmen to help the fund.

The toys will then be taken to Maynard's Auction Rooms at 731-33 Johnson. Here, toys of all sizes, shapes and description will be knocked down to the highest bidder, with the 500 Fund the beneficiary.

Here, too, volunteer work comes to the aid of the fund. Toys will be hauled to Maynard's on a truck donated by Art Kool of Reliable Transfer.

As in other years, toy buyers can be assured that every penny paid at the auction finds its way into the 500 Fund.

Giving to the 500 Fund is probably the easiest thing you'll do this Christmas season. Just mail or bring what you feel you can spare to The Daily Colonist, 2631 Douglas.

BEHIND THE GLASS

By Jim Tang

THAT TIME AGAIN: It's Conso's playoff time again and curling interest is quickening among those who like to play for the chance to represent their club, their zone and, then, their province on the road to Canadian honors.

With the deadline set for Friday, eight rinks have entered at the Victoria Curling Club. Six are made up of club members and two are from the Sunday Commercial League.

Judging from the lineups, some keen competition is in store before the Victoria representative for the Island play-down is decided.

Tony Gatoiki, who will have Gary Leibel, Gordie Robertson and Danny Martel in support, will probably once again assume the role of favorite but Tony hasn't been curling much, if any, this season, and could be in for a stiff argument from several sources.

Gordie Moore has something which looks like a possibility in Allan Paul, Ron Jacob and Kirby Moyssey and there is nothing which looks easy in the other four club entries.

Steve Haywood will challenge with Gar Taylor, Elmer Hoffman and Norm Beattie; Larry Marshall has Bob McInnes, Barry Harvey and Dick Fisher; Jim Dickson has Les Brice, Roger Pick and Jim Tang and then there is the Ken Sturrock-Laurie Perlette-Ralph Schmidt, Bill Young combination which has been curling together well in club draws.

There may be a line-up change or two but there isn't anything which looks easy in the lot. Challenging from the commercial league are rinks entered by Walter Gallagher and Norm McBride.

Playdowns start on June 2 and the method of playing off will be decided at a meeting tonight. A double-draw knock-out appears to be the preferred plan.

ESQUIMALT, TOO! At Esquimalt Municipal Centre, which will declare its own rink for the Island final, manager Joe Ianarrell reports that 10 rinks have entered with the possibility of more before the Saturday deadline.

Trev Emberton, Wes Young, Bob Jones, Jack Tucker and George Stocomb have entered RCN rinks. Bill Brown and Alex More are entered from the Dockyard League. Jack McIvor from the Esquimalt Winter Club, Clarence Dobbin from the Saturday Commercial League and Bill Dunstan, who threw three rocks for Gatoiki in the 1958 Brier, will skip a rink from Esquimalt.

Winners from Esquimalt and Victoria will play in the Island final, at Nanaimo in January, against winners from Duncan, Nanaimo and Alberni and Comox Valleys. A double knockout identical to that to be used for the provincial final will be the method of deciding the Island's two representatives.

AND THE LADIES: Meanwhile, the ladies will get started in their local playdowns on Sunday at the Victoria Curling Club, when four rinks play the first game of a round-robin series to decide one winner.

Here, too, the result would be hard to foretell. Flora Martin will have Beth Sealy, Edythe Pick and Marion Smith and has a past record of success but competition this time seems better balanced.

Kay Trevelyan will skip a rink which includes Claire Duncan, Pearl Elliott and Scotty Smith; Marg Sturrock will try with Dorothy Fukuyama, Eve Tang and Peggy Bullock and Mary Beattie has lined up Ella MacDonald, Mary Wilkinson and Betty Hodgson.

Survivor from the ladies' section of the Victoria Curling Club will meet the winners from the Victoria Ladies Curling Club and the Sunday Commercial League in a double round-robin starting Jan. 2 to decide who will carry on to the Island finals, at Courtenay, Jan. 12-14.

CHAMP HERE MONDAY: Canada's reigning champion will be here Monday with the same rink which won the honors last March in Calgary. That means huge Hec Gervais will be calling the shots for Ron Anton, Ray Werner and Wally Ussialak in the two games scheduled for Esquimalt Municipal Centre, at 2:30 and 5:30 p.m.

Despite his size, Gervais has that delicate touch when it comes to drawing and in the youthful Anton he has one of the best shotmakers in the game.

Opposing Gervais will be a rink drawn from curlers at the Esquimalt Centre. It will be skipped by Gary Leibel, Danny Martel will throw three rocks, Wes Young second rocks and Bill Dunstan leads off.

Admission to each game is one dollar and tickets can be purchased at Esquimalt Municipal Centre.

EXTRA END: Alberni Valley may have its strongest Conso challenge for some time in a rink which will be skipped by Rod Carmichael, who last year lost out to Tony Fok in the provincial final. The former Nelson star is now resident in Alberni. Marg Fuller, who skipped a Nanaimo rink to the Western Canada ladies' championship in 1957, tries again with two members of her championship rink and a new addition, Sylvia Koster will be vice-skip and Pat Good, who threw three rocks in 1957, will lead off. In between the two will be Min Holm. Frenchy D'Amour, who skipped the only B.C. rink ever to win the Brier Tankard at Calgary in 1948, has finally joined forces with Reg Stone, who has had five chances without success. D'Amour will curl second rocks, taking over from Buzz McGilneay, who is curling out of Roseland this season and will try to make it as a skip with the help of the stylish Feeney brothers. Four entries have already been received for the first Pacific Coast Curling Association bonspiel, set for Feb. 5-11 at Victoria Curling Club and Esquimalt Municipal Centre. Grant McDonald of Courtenay was the first to enter, and was followed by Frank Hickey of Port Alberni, Bob Douglas of Victoria and Archie McMillan of Vancouver. McMillan has lined up Dean Hayes of Hanes as his skip while Warren Paul is to call the shots for the Hickey entry.

AFL's Dirty Linen on View

Lovable Harry Inspires Confidence

By RED SMITH
NEW YORK—It is a hard some face, indeed, that the American Football League is showing to the public, with the commissioner accusing the owners of double-dealing behind his back, lovable Harry Wismer calling the commissioner a liar, and the promoters of all eight teams unflinchingly wailing on their promises. Obviously, this is the intel-gent way to inspire public confidence, and cause interest, win a large and loyal following, and stimulate business. It is exactly what the enterprise needs to triple the massive financial losses of last year and reduce the backers' income tax problems to a minimum. In less than two seasons of operation, the infantile organization has achieved remarkable results. For example, the Thanksgiving Day "grudge match" between the New York Titans and the Buffalo Bills drew either 8,114, or 12,023 customers, both figures being announced as official. To be sure, neither crowd would be considered great in Green Bay, Wis., but it must be remembered that the Polo Grounds is accessible to only 15,000,000 or so dedicated football fans, and there were competing attractions such as the Coney Island Walk and the Holstra-C. W. Post game. Though he is too modest to admit it, Harry Wismer is entitled to a major share of the credit. Unquestionably an important factor in the Titans' success is what Madison Avenue would call the "public image" of Harry as a sterling sportsman, a benevolent employer, and an enterprising, imaginative promoter. The Grand Old Man of the Titans is so shy and self-effacing that for a while this season he wasn't even speaking to his coach, Sammy Baugh. Ultimately he came out of his shell, however, probably out of a sense of fairness to his public. Lately both he and Joe Foss, the league commissioner, have been speaking freely, though not necessarily to each other. "Wismer can be kicked out with a three-quarters vote of the owners," Foss says, "and I'm pretty sure I have the votes." "If Foss is willing to move his office from Dallas to New York," Wismer says, "I'm willing to let him stay as commissioner."

DID THEY TALKING
Elsewhere around the League, the boys aren't saying much. They did their talking over the telephone when they broke their promise to keep their cotton pickin' paws off undergraduate players until after the college season. This was a three-way agreement among the AFL, the National League, and the culture foundries. Though the chances are some quiet claim-jumping was done as usual by individual scouts in both leagues, there was a public show of good faith when the Americans scheduled their draft meeting for Dec. 2 and the Nationals for Dec. 4.

KEPT WORD
So far as is known, the Nationals have kept their word. The Americans jumped the gun by conducting a sneak draft by long-distance two weeks ahead of time, and if a single owner has said this was a shoddy, dishonest thing to do, his voice hasn't been heard here. At least one college player has admitted he is already a pro, having signed a contract and taken $10,000 from an American League club. Joe Foss says this was done without his knowledge and to his considerable embarrassment.

Harry Wismer, an old hand at secret phone calls late at night, says Foss is a liar and did know all about the owners' perfidy, though Harry hasn't used that word.

OLD-FASHIONED
Foss, taking the old-fashioned and unrelentless attitude that gentlemen are supposed to keep their promises, has declared the premature draft void and vowed to disapprove any contracts dated earlier than Dec. 2, as though a cheater would boggle at faking the date.

Wismer says no cow-country politician. Foss used to be Governor of South Dakota—is going to prevent him from pushing through negotiations with Ernie Davis, of Syracuse, and the other players whom he claimed by telephone.

BOBSON'S CHOICE
Altogether, the situation offers an attractive insight into the workings of professional sport on the highest level. Joe Foss must be even prouder of his association with these sportsmen than he is of his Congressional Medal of Honor.

There is no disposition here to take sides in the argument. The old Marine combat pilot is a man who commands respect, in this book, anyway. On the other hand, to know Harry Wismer is to love him to distraction.

Canucks 'Inspired' Pelletier Benched

Vancouver Canucks don't need to have Art Chapman in Vancouver. He can, it seems, get results all the way from Long Beach, Calif.

Perhaps it was only coincidence but a report yesterday that the PNE was to bring Chapman back for a month "to straighten out the Canucks" and that Chapman was willing to come back was followed by the Canucks turning in their best display of the Western Hockey League season.

Breton in their last four games, the collection of talent which Chapman once said made up the best club Canucks had ever had, almost looked that in whipping Seattle to a 4-1, before a meagre crowd of 1,821 Vancouver Forum fans.

There weren't many more

League for Piggott's Saskatoon entry.

Waugh stopped 23 of 24 shots as the Blades came on to score the next five goals for a 5-3 lead, then wound it up with three of the four goals in the third period.

Gerry Goyer led the winners with his 12th, 13th and 14th goals and his 15th assist while linemate Bruce Carmichael scored once and assisted on four goals.

MARCEL PELLETIER ... on way out?

Even Grant Likes Cats

TORONTO (CP)—Head coach Bud Grant led his Winnipeg Blue Bombers into town Tuesday and promptly heaped praise on Hamilton Tiger Cats.

"They're the best team we've seen all year," he said after the Bombers ran through a brisk training drill.

Light snow covered the field. Grant said he is making no predictions on the Hamilton-Winnipeg Grey Cup game Saturday.

Unofficially he's a "Jack of all sports." Officially he's Chief Petty Officer Jack Strachan. He modestly describes himself as "just a fellow who enjoys sports ... all sports."

But the Pacific Command of the Royal Canadian Navy regards him as a sportsman who "through his own achievements and efforts has contributed most to sports in the Command throughout the past year."

Because of this, CPO Strachan has been awarded the coveted Lieut.-Cmdr. Charles McDonald Trophy ... given in honor of such achievement and effort. He will be formally presented with the large silver trophy at HMCS Naden.

Calling Vancouver his home town, "Chief" Strachan has been interested in sports for as long as he can remember. In various schools of the mainland city he participated in lacrosse, soccer and softball.

He joined the Navy 13 years ago, and ever since then has devoted practically all his free time to sports and athletic events.

WINS IN EAST
Nearly four years of his service career were spent with the Atlantic Command, and it was there in 1954 that he won the Admiral Jones' Trophy—awarded annually on the east coast for the same reason he has won the McDonald Trophy here.

For the past month or so CPO Strachan has served with HMCS Naden on the staff of the Principal Naval Officer's Office at the Yarrow's Ltd. shipyard. For more than two years before, he was with HMCS Skeena, and in that destroyer-escort, participated in a number of the ship's sports programs when time ashore permitted.

PLAYS SOCCER
Now that he is based ashore again, he is back in his sporting stride ... with soccer, basketball and volleyball heading the list. He also plays soccer on "crazy street" with Brodies of the Victoria and District League.

"Chief" Strachan's athletic program isn't confined just to land activities. He likes swimming, and last year completed a clearance diving course with the navy's operational diving unit at Colwood. That, of course, led to an endorsement for skin-diving. And just a few weeks ago he started curling.

Fast Finish Pleases Fans
NAGPUR (Reuters)—Set to score 65 runs in 30 minutes after a surprise declaration by India's central zone on the last day of their match here Tuesday, England's MCC failed by only seven runs.

Hitting at everything and running hard between the wickets, MCC made 38 for three wickets in six overs to the delight of a 15,000 crowd.

It is one of the unwritten rules of cricket that there is no point in declaring unless you have a chance of winning, but K. M. Rangta, the central zone captain, set out to give the crowd a treat by closing his second innings at 235 for six.

fans at the other two games played last night. Owner Jim Piggott was on hand and almost lonesome in the big, new Los Angeles Sports Arena as his Blades went on a scoring binge to whip Spokane Comets, 9-5.

There were only 2,112 other fans on hand at Edmonton, the Flyers drew their smallest crowd of the season—2,151 fans—as they lost to Calgary Stampedeers.

SOME DOUBT
Victory for the Blades may have, at least for the time being, saved coach George Agar's job but there has to be some doubt now that Marcel Pelletier is to continue as the regular goalkeeper.

Pelletier has a goals-against average of more than four a game and when the Comets drove three routine shots past him in a 3-1 lead by the 13th minute of the first period, Piggott swung into action.

BOOKIE TRIED
He ordered Agar to remove Pelletier and insert Gary Waugh, a 20-year-old rookie who played last season in the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League.

'We'll Win by Two Majors' Predicts Hamilton Halfback

HAMILTON (CP)—Ralph Goldston, who has the dubious distinction of being the only player in Grey Cup history to be banished for throwing a punch, doesn't say Winnipeg Blue Bombers should default their Grey Cup final date with Hamilton Tiger-Cats this Saturday. But, for his money, the Westerners haven't a chance.

"We'll win by two touchdowns," the 31-year-old two-way half-back predicted Tuesday night.

Goldston, an old pro from Youngstown, Ohio, who played in the National Football League before coming to Canada six years ago, doesn't mean to start an East-West war.

"I think we should beat them by two touchdowns," he said. "That's my opinion, but I'm a lot more confident than other people. I just think that we're that much better than they are."

Goldie, his hair flecked with grey, said the Bombers didn't impress him earlier this season when Titans beat them 30-9 in an East-West interlocking game.

"And I don't think they're any better now."

Goldston probably will take a lot of ribbing when the two clubs meet head on at Toronto's waterfront Canadian National Exhibition stadium. But he is known around the Titans dressing-room as a chap who can hold his own in the conversation league.

Besides, he's tough. He belted Winnipeg's Leo Lewis in the 1956 final at Vancouver and was tossed out of the game for ungentlemanly conduct. Players have tossed punches in cup games but Goldston, now a Hamilton district school teacher, was the only one to be caught in the act.

The second-ranked Buckeyes last Saturday clinched the Big Ten championship.

White Sox Acquire More Young Players

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Chicago White Sox are beginning to get a new look. Overloaded with veterans for years, the Pale Hose seem to be embarking on a youth movement.

Tuesday, they sent Roy Sievers, 35-year-old first baseman and outfielder to Philadelphia Phillies and got in exchange John Buzhardt, a 25-year-old right-handed pitcher.

On Monday, the White Sox traded Minnie Mino, 30-year-old outfielder, to St. Louis Cardinals for 30-year-old Joe Cunningham, who will probably take over at first base.

Sievers is rated one of the most feared right-handed hitters in baseball. He batted .285, drove in 92 runs and hit 27 home runs last season but the Chicago club got a good return.

Smith, a one-time bright hope in the Los Angeles Dodgers' chain, is rated a fine prospect. Buzhardt has been a tough-luck pitcher with the Phillies and is considered to

Soon Obsolete

Tickets Dwindle
New City Bylaw

Victoria's police commission took a worried look at a dwindling supply of traffic tickets yesterday and will instruct the city solicitor to ask for a provincial order-in-council authorizing the city to go ahead with the use of a new type of combination ticket-summmons.

But the request for the order-in-council will have to wait until city council ratifies the city's new Streets Traffic Bylaw, still in the hands of the public works committee.

ECONOMY THE REASON
The bylaw is expected to come before council sometime this week. Until it does, the ticket supply will have to continue to dwindle with no chance of replenishment.

The reason is economy. The police commission doesn't want to place an order for the old-style tickets, which would soon become obsolete.

COST ELIMINATED

The new ticket-summmons, which has received the blessing of the attorney-general's battery of legal experts, will eliminate the cost of preparing summonses and the need of serving them.

City solicitor T. P. O'Grady explained last night that the request for an order-in-council approving the new tickets would be a routine matter.

NOT COVERED

He added that the order for printing the new tickets could not be placed until the Streets Traffic Bylaw was adopted, since it covered a number of offences not covered in the old bylaw.

Once this bylaw leaves committee, where it has been for a year, comes before council and is adopted, another bylaw authorizing the use of the new tickets will be prepared for adoption.

Then the order for the tickets will be placed.

ENOUGH LEFT

There is little danger that the city will run out of tickets for erring motorists before both bylaws are adopted, however. A city official explained that, though the supply was dwindling, there were still enough to go around.

Man's Mastery Shown
By Flicking the Switch

Students in a second-year chemistry class at Victoria University were given an unscheduled demonstration of man's mastery over electricity yesterday.

An overhead light fixture went on the blink and belched out clouds of smoke.

'B.C. Denied Benefits'

Federal Subsidy System
Hit by City Fisherman

By IAN STREET

Capt. G. A. Veres, managing director of McKay-Cormack Ltd., said his yard is now engaged in building a 57-foot dragger which on the east coast would qualify for a sizable subsidy. Because it is being built for use in B.C. waters there is no federal subsidy, he said.

Frank Smith, 3918 Cadboro Bay Road, owner of the vessel, said the federal subsidy of $250 per gross ton which applies in the Maritimes would cut the $35,000 cost of the dragger by "almost $10,000" if it applied here.

"I was under the impression we would qualify for the federal subsidy when it was announced by Ottawa," said Mr. Smith. "But I've since discovered that in the eyes of the federal government we don't exist if we're west of the Rockies."

WE PAY TAXES

The commercial fisherman said: "It's not right we should be discriminated against. After all, we're in Canada and pay taxes to Ottawa the same as everyone else."

The dragger will be fitted with the latest radar and echo-sounding gear. It will boast hydraulic steering and probably hydraulic winches as well to haul in nets from the sea bottom.

WIDER THAN NORMAL

The Monk-designed hull is 17 feet eight inches in beam—about 2½ feet wider than the normal dragger of this size—to give it easy riding qualities to cope with the huge swells off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

READY IN APRIL

Capt. Veres said at present 10 men are working on the dragger which is expected to be ready for fishing in April of next year.

The yard spokesman said the general outlook for winter work at McKay-Cormack is "fairly good" with other private fishboat jobs now in the negotiating stage and the prospect of some additional work for the federal government.

Bigger Wail

Mayor Percy Scurrell is hopeful of improvement of the city's barely-audible civil defence sirens.

He was commenting on a major weakness exposed by Exercise Tocsin B—few people could hear the sirens.

"There is no question but that the new sirens now being installed will be more effective than the ones that we have, but I won't know how effective until I hear them," he said.

New Bus Lure

'Hall for Half-Price'
But City Plays SafeVictoria Reluctant
About Transit Gift

By TED SHACKLEFORD

Victoria is playing coy and safe in the web of negotiations surrounding the B.C. Power Commission's latest attempt to get rid of the Greater Victoria bus system.

This became apparent yesterday when the Colonist sought details of the power commission's latest approach to city hall.

NO AUTHORITY

The commission, it was learned, has offered to sell the B.C. Hydro building to Victoria for less than half its assessed value of $660,000—if the city also takes the bus system as a gift.

Lending urgency to the offer, from the commission's point of view, is the fact that the commission is due to assume responsibility for B.C. Electric services in Greater Victoria from Jan. 1 and has no authority to run a bus system.

GROUP INTERESTED

Also involved in the web of negotiations is Brig.-Gen. Timothy Manning of West Vancouver, representing a group of private investors interested in buying the bus system.

On the face of it, the city could accept the bus service as a gift from the power commission and resell it at a nice profit to Gen. Manning's group.

But even with a firm commitment to buy, on the part of Gen. Manning's group, the city is reluctant to take the transit gift.

CITY MAN DOUBTS

Before it was taken over by the provincial government, the B.C. Electric announced several times that the bus service in this area loses about $500,000 a year, and the city doubts that it can be made an economic proposition.

"If the private group bought the bus service from the city and later went broke trying to run it, then presumably the last owner would have to take on the job of continuing the service," a city council source explained yesterday.

"The city wants to make sure that the power commission was the last owner in case this does happen.

"Dr. Keenleyside (chairman of the power commission) has overplayed his hand with this offer."

Gen. Manning represented a group of United Kingdom investors in 1958 when he attempted to buy the complete B.C. Electric transit system, both here and on the mainland. The proposed deal fell through.

'Get All the Facts'

Wilson Outlines Ideas for Victoria

R. B. WILSON
... opinion shortly

Mayorality candidate R. B. Wilson is reserving judgment on whether or not the city should buy the B.C. Hydro building for use as a new city hall.

"Until we have all the facts regarding the proposed deal it is difficult to arrive at an intelligent opinion," he said.

NOT FIRM PRICE

"I understand the price of $660,000 is not a firm price. It is an appraised value and a basis for negotiation.

"Terms of payment and rate of interest do not appear to have been agreed upon ... I expect shortly to be in a position to express an opinion based on the gathering of all the facts."

Mr. Wilson's views on other questions:

Voting Facilities. I favor the single polling area. It is certainly less costly for the municipality. I have never found it to be unduly crowded.

Amalgamation. There would be many advantages to the Greater Victoria community if there was some form of amalgamation. There would undoubtedly be economy ... There seems to be an increasing number of problems and developments that would be handled more efficiently by one civic government.

Auditorium. The prime need for the development of the convention business is a convention hall which could be used, in addition, for many purposes such as exhibitions, boat shows and so on. I would not be in favor of embarking on a multi-million-dollar auditorium at the present time as, historically, auditoriums are costly and seldom make a profit.

Secret Meetings. There are, occasionally, times when in the public interest the council's deliberations should be in camera but ... these should be kept to a minimum.

Downtown Pedestrians.

To help Victoria voters choose among the three men contesting the mayoralty election Dec. 14, the Colonist asked them for their views on nine pertinent subjects.

Centre. I would favor construction of a downtown recreational centre for our senior citizens but I believe the planning for this should be done in conjunction with the other municipalities.

Bus System. I am definitely against the city at any time taking over the bus service on its own. Any takeover should be done on an area basis.

Capital Financing. I would advocate continuance of the pay-as-you-go system with the renewal that borrowing could be considered for any major new expenditures approved by the ratepayers.

Future Problems. The tourist and convention business offers possibility of almost unlimited expansion ... There are great opportunities for increasing our share of this constantly expanding industry. The burden of school taxation rests too heavily on our city taxpayers ... a greater percentage (should) be borne by the senior governments. All efforts should be made to assist in the solution of the serious problems faced by our shipyards. Adequate off-street parking is a must. This will protect the taxpayers against a potential decrease in tax revenue through depreciation of city values, brought about by development of shopping areas outside the city.

Mr. Wilson, 57, is making his first bid for election in the city but served two terms as councillor in Oak Bay, from 1949 to 1952.

Born in this area, Mr. Wilson is retired from business, but serves on the executive of a number of organizations.

BUSINESSFUL CAMPAIGN

He is chairman of the Victoria University Development Board and spearheaded the board's successful campaign to raise $2,500,000; he is a vice-president of the Royal Jubilee Hospital, a director of the Queen Alexandra Solarium for Crippled Children and a director of Norfolk House School.

Mr. Wilson is also a director of Victoria Automobile Club, chairman of the Victoria advisory board to the Canada Trust Company, a past chairman of the Greater Victoria Community Chest and a past president of Victoria Golf Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were married in 1937 and have two children—David, attending Victoria College, and Penny, attending Norfolk House School.

The program is sponsored by Oak Bay Board of Trade and will run from Dec. 15.

Business In Spirit Of Dickens

Getting into the spirit of a real old-fashioned Christmas, Oak Bay Avenue merchants will adopt a Charles Dickens theme for the business district between Wilmot and Monterey this year.

Plans are being made to mount plywood cut-outs of Dickens' characters on electric poles along Oak Bay Avenue. Loudspeakers will play recorded music and a huge Christmas tree will sparkle in a supermarket parking lot.

The municipality has volunteered to string colored lights in the festive section and merchants will add a personal touch to the events by dressing in 19th-century costume.

The program is sponsored by Oak Bay Board of Trade and will run from Dec. 15.

Car Fall
Blamed

A woman who was found seriously injured and unconscious in the parking lot of a city hotel early Sunday may have fallen from a moving car.

Mrs. Juanita Clark, 38, of 503 Admirals, found after a private party at the Ingham Hotel, is reported to have shown some improvement in St. Joseph's Hospital.

She suffered head injuries and bruises to the hands and knees.

WHERE DID THE TIME GO

Peter Bruton's
NOTEBOOK

LOST WEEKEND: CKDA's Bill Pike picked up the phone the other day and a woman asked:

"Could you tell me the time?"

"Yes, it's 10:30," replied Bill. "Is that a.m. or p.m.?"

"It's a.m., m'am."

"What day is this?"

"Sunday."

"What's the date?"

"Nov. 26."

"Oh, thank you," said the woman. "You see, I just got back."

Where from, lady, where from?

SILENT SERVICE: A funeral procession on its way out to the veterans' cemetery in Esquimalt the other day passed a field where a number of pavy boys were practising football.

As the hearse approached they dropped the ball and faced the roadway, standing at ramrod attention.

It was just a little thing, maybe, but it touched the hearts of the mourners, who would like it known how much they appreciated the gesture.

Within six minutes the fire chief was at the door.

The only thing burning was the mother's face—but it does say something for the service provided by the telephone company.

THE ITEMIZER: Victoria's tourist boosters Marn Lane and William Hawkins seem to have taken all the glory in a big section on Victoria in the current National Geographic magazine. Playing second fiddle, as it were, are such items as the hanging flower baskets, telly-bus, and other assorted scenery. The piece is by Alan Phillips entitled "Canada—My Country."

INSTANT ACTION: A family moved into a house on Transit Road the other day and the telephone was installed on Monday.

Yesterday morning the three-year-old of the house picked up the phone, dialled

"Canada—My Country," and

"Squawk, squawk, squawk, that's all I hear," she said. "I haven't even made it yet."

UPDATED ACCOUNT: New twist to an old story was given by Ed Mallick yesterday.

Seems the Poppa Bear went downstairs and in a deep growl demanded: "Who's been eating my porridge?"

The Baby Bear followed him and in a squeaky voice demanded: "Who's been eating my porridge?"

The Momma Bear looked up. "Squawk, squawk, squawk, that's all I hear," she said. "I haven't even made it yet."

NANAIMO — A 17-year-old Ladysmith boy says that, after a fatal accident near Nanaimo, valuable time was lost in trying to flag down motorists to get help.

John Aiken was testifying to a coroner's jury investigating the death Nov. 15 of nurse Jean Marie Salton, 21, of Chase River.

PORT ALBERNI — Fergie Glenn, chairman of Port Alberni harbor commission, said Tuesday he had assured by H. C. McQuillan, local Tory MP, that federal funds will be made available for projects planned for the waterfront here.

MAIN ITEMS

A 100-foot extension to the assembly dock, rebuilding of approaches to the dock and extensive dredging in the area of the fishermen's floats are the main items planned by the commission.

A new float, 300 feet in length, is to be added for tugboats and fishboats.

Mr. Glenn said that, with the additional mooring space in Port Alberni and completion of the small boat basin at the mouth of Kitsukals Creek, Alberni, it is hoped to alleviate the congestion in the fishermen's float area.

Enos Soars Today

All suited-up and ready to go on three-times-around-the-globe orbital trip in space early today is Enos, a 37½-pound chimpanzee. If all goes well, Enos will blaze trail for U.S. manned orbital voyage—possibly before the end of the year but more likely around mid-January or later. Chimp is scheduled to circle the earth in 4½ hours and be brought back inside the spacecraft to a parachute landing in the Atlantic near Puerto Rico. (AP Photoscan.)

Didn't Know Secrets Says Fleming

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming denied Tuesday he knew the contents of Britain's "secret speech" when he called on Prime Minister Macmillan in London nine days ago to ask for its full text.

A report in The Guardian of Manchester to this effect was "a gross fabrication," Mr. Fleming said. (See Guardian story, page 3.)

Foulkes Points Out:

Reds Can Seal Berlin Without Force

An effective blockade of West Berlin by the Soviet Union without the use of armed force can be accomplished if carefully planned, Gen. Charles Foulkes told Victoria Kiwanis Club yesterday.

The initiative to use force would then be up to the West, said the retired chief of the Canadian army general staff.

"Bridges could be closed for repairs or actually taken down, railways could be stopped for repairs to the right-of-way, air control beacons could be jammed by the local radio stations and anti-aircraft missile units could carry out firing exercises in the air corridors."

HAILED AT BRIDGE

The general said it would be a formidable task to keep open a route 110 miles through East German territory. Army garrisons would have to be stationed along the route. Even then a new armored column could be stopped at the first bridge which was taken out.

Scientists Survive Radioactive Diet

LONDON (Reuters)—Three scientists Tuesday ended a month of living on a diet of food and drink deliberately poisoned by radioactive fallout and said they feel perfectly fit.

They would have been happy to continue indefinitely if the menu had not been so dull, they said.

The three men were Dr. J. F. Loutit, Dr. G. E. Harrison and T. E. F. Carr of the British Medical Council's radiobiological research unit at Harwell.

The bulk of the scientists' diet consisted of bread made from grain grown on land sprayed with radioactive strontium 90 and of milk from cows injected with a solution of strontium 85.

As a result of their experiment they said they are satisfied no one need fear the radioactivity which is expected to fall next spring from Russia's recent bomb explosions.

Senator's Hosts Clubbed

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—"Crazed" Katanga troops in Elisabethville last night invaded a dinner party being held for visiting U.S. Senator Thomas Dodd and his wife and dragged away two high UN officials, it was announced here.

The officials, George Ivan Smith and Brian Urquhart, were forced outside and beaten with rifle butts. Their attackers were described as "crazed gendarmes and para-commandos."

Acting Secretary General Thant ordered UN officials in Katanga to lodge a protest "in the strongest terms against this inhuman treatment." He said the officials should demand public apologies by responsible Katanga officials and "severe punishment for those responsible."

The United Nations said the attack occurred in the presence of Dodd, his wife and a group from the U.S. consulate attending the dinner.

Smith is temporarily in charge of UN affairs in Katanga during the absence of Dr. Conor Cruise O'Brien. Urquhart is assistant to Dr. Sture Linner, officer in charge of the UN operation in the Congo.

The United Nations said the two officials had attended a reception for Dodd at the U.S. consulate in Elisabethville. Then they left for a diplomatic residence for a dinner in honor of the visiting senator.

The two officials were first accosted by Katanga troops in their car en route to the dinner, the announcement said. They talked their way out, however, and proceeded to the dinner.

Later the gendarmes and para-commandos dragged Smith and Urquhart out of the house and beat them with rifle butts, the announcement said.

UN Raps South Africa

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The United Nations General Assembly yesterday approved 97 to two a denunciation of South Africa's white supremacy policies. But it discarded committee recommendations for harsh boycott measures and for reading South Africa out of the United Nations.

South Africa and Portugal cast the negative votes.

The assembly knocked out boycotts and expulsion features from a 31-nation measure and amendments calling for arms and oil embargoes.

After hours of debate, the United Nations Security Council gave a cold shoulder last night to Cuba's complaint against the use of U.S. Navy ships in the Dominican crisis. Not one member—including the Soviet Union—was willing to back up the Cuban charges with a formal resolution.

Earlier in the Security Council, Soviet delegate Zorin again accused the U.S. of "manoeuvres" against Cuba and the Dominican people. U.S. Ambassador Stevenson urged the council to conclude "this exercise in futility."

West's Dilemma

troops in Berlin to take care of this sort of action.

Gen. Foulkes said that the Soviet Union had demonstrated a genuine concern that a re-armed German republic may some day attempt to unify Germany and readjust the Polish frontier by use of force.

The general said the role of NATO forces in Germany, including the Canadian brigade and air division, was to provide a shield that would hold a minor aggression.

There was always the chance that increased tension and acts of violence such as trying to tear down the East German constructed wall would cause armed incidents, he continued.

Udall, Bennett Under Attack

PRINCE GEORGE—In a long-awaited major Columbia River policy speech last night Justice Minister Davie Fulton unleashed a verbal barrage against a U.S. cabinet member, a searing attack on Premier Bennett and termed B.C.'s power sale proposal a "sell-out."

He told a board of trade audience that the Conservative government's policy on the Columbia has not changed and denied it has precipitated a federal cabinet split.

Major points made by Mr. Fulton were:

- British Columbia's proposal to sell Columbia downstream benefits to the United States would be a "sellout" of provincial resources.
- Ottawa's policy against power export has not changed.
- The Bennett government "together with certain power and industrial interests in the United States" is trying to "entice us into a quick sale for a long-term period."
- A pressure and propaganda campaign to force Ottawa into approving sale of downstream benefits has "gone into high gear."
- U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall has used "pretty strong words" for a U.S. cabinet minister talking about Canadian affairs and "presumes to forecast a change in our policy."
- What the U.S. failed to get at the Columbia treaty negotiating table "is being offered them by Mr. Bennett on a platter."
- Premier Bennett "pretends without actually saying so that he has the support of the U.S. President."

Reception-Line Talk

Seattle power talks between Premier Bennett and President John Kennedy were "little more than a rendezvous at a reception line."

● Columbia power is the cheapest British Columbia will ever get anywhere.

● Downstream benefits should be retained in British Columbia "to help in building a mature economy" and to create permanent industrial jobs.

● United States, under the terms of the Columbia treaty, already receives a fair share of development benefits and "we cannot allow Mr. Bennett to hand them over to the U.S."

● To exchange the present Columbia arrangement "for a penny-wise and pound-foolish agreement . . . would be sheer madness."

● Premier Bennett has shown "a full measure of his partisanship and showmanship, his gamesmanship and one-upmanship . . . I invite him now to show some statesmanship."

Mr. Fulton, speaking in calm, calculated fashion and displaying little outward emotion, talked for 65 minutes, then submitted to 45 minutes of questioning from the floor where 230 persons sat paying close attention to his remarks.

Reasonable Settlement

Mr. Fulton said the federal government is prepared to negotiate and discuss the Columbia development with the B.C. government toward any reasonable settlement of the present stalemate.

"But we are not prepared to compromise the principles I have outlined," he said, making it clear that these principles are based on the treaty's provision for return to Canada. It needs them, its share of the downstream benefit power in power and not in cash.

During the question period he said the B.C. government has the moral obligation, if not the legal obligation, to proceed with the Columbia River development under terms of the international treaty.

The federal government was not opposed to the development of the Peace River project, in which Prince George has a vital interest, but this project had certain problems which must be solved by the person responsible for creating them.

He said these problems were of cost and markets and that it was Premier Bennett's responsibility to resolve them.

Avoided the Peace

Mayor Garvin Dezell of Prince George rose during the question period and thanked Mr. Fulton for his detail on the Columbia but said he effectively avoided the Peace and then said he felt development of the Columbia was development of only a portion of B.C. while development of the Peace was development of all of the province.

Mr. Fulton, in replying, reiterated that Ottawa does not oppose development of the Peace but that B.C. has a moral obligation as a party to the international treaty to go ahead.

The Columbia could meet B.C.'s power needs for about 20 years, creating the problems of cost and markets for Peace power.

Mr. Fulton said there is another sort of problem—that of navigation on the Peace and Mackenzie River systems. This brought guffaws and laughter from the audience but applause followed a few minutes later when Mr. Fulton had concluded explaining his position on this question.

He said he believed the problems could be solved but that they must be studied. The system was the main artery of commerce of the Northwest Territories.

Fantastic Blunder —Bonner

By TERRY HAMMOND

Canadian Justice Minister Davie Fulton's slam-bam attack on B.C.'s Columbia River plans last night was later termed a "fantastic blunder" by Attorney-General Robert Bonner.

Referring to Mr. Fulton's references to U.S. cabinet member Stewart Udall the attorney-general said, "why the Canadian minister of justice should choose Prince George as the stage from which to berate the interior secretary of the United States is one of the political mysteries of the year."

INCREDIBLE GAFFE

He said Mr. Fulton's speech in Prince George was only remarkable for being "an incredible gaffe" because it "completely ignores Clause 8 of the international treaty which specifically provides for the sale to the U.S. of Canadian (downstream benefit) entitlement."

The speech, he said, "fails to reveal to the people of this province that during treaty negotiations there was a firm understanding between B.C. and Ottawa that the sale of downstream benefits to the United States would be firmly agreed upon before ratification of the treaty by Canada."

RINE ABOVE IT

Mr. Bonner said he himself insisted on this provision during treaty negotiations.

He was critical of Mr. Fulton for delivering his speech on the eve of expected Columbia talks between Premier Bennett and federal Finance Minister Donald Fleming but said he is sure the principals "will rise above it."

Premier Bennett last night declined to comment on Mr. Fulton's charges and refused to read a text of the Prince George speech.

Fulton Denies Power Compromise

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—A report the federal government might agree to a compromise on the question of letting British Columbia sell some of its Columbia power rights to the U.S. was given a "complete and unqualified" denial last night by Justice Minister Fulton.
